OLYMPIC SHOWS SOUTH WHO'S THE NEW BOSS

Australia Day NSL preview issue

What if? You could go on all day with these hypotheticals, but the question has to be asked: if the World Club Championship was played this week how well would the current leaders Sydney Olympic have gone against Vasco, Necaxa and the ambivalent giants of world football Manchester United?

On the strength of their stylish demolition of Oceania champions South Melbourne at Belmore, Sydney Olympic may well have gone much better than their hapless visitors last Sunday.

But that's just speculation and we will never know anyway.

The reality is that with a full complement to choose from (something he has not been able to do lately), coach Branko Culina has a side capable of taking sides apart, and, most importantly for an NSL title-winning side, defending stoutly.

Yes, the keeper's position may be a little suspect at times (both Kourtis and Bouhoutsos have been used this year) but the defensive cabal of Juric, Baillie and Zoricich is experienced and wily enough to cover potential trouble.

Yet it is going forward where Olympic really fires the imagination. Gabriel Mendez is in the finest form of his career, Brett Emerton seems more content - and useful - playing wider, and upfront Pablo Cardozo (tipped for a Soccerroo call-up, see story page 21) is, well, Pablo Cardozo.

Add to this the emergence of Zlatko Arambasic as a goalscoring option, Scott Thomas, Marcus Phillips and Lindsay Wilson, plus exciting Nick Carle coming off the bench, and it's a side with all the hallmarks of a top-two finisher.

But before the Olympic fans get carried away there is the more pressing problem of a wounded South Melbourne tomorrow in the 'return' bout at Lakeside.

In the last two or three seasons there have been few sides capable of taking three points at their fortress.

However the main danger for Olympic will be pride. South's squad has enormous pride, built on their achievements of the last few years and instilled by a coach who has always maintained that team spirit is integral to success.

Maybe last Sunday was just a post-Brazil blip? They did after all stay there an extra five days.

South will not want to lose in front of their fans in their first home game back since their samba sojourn. Not only will it put their finals dreams - not to mention a 'three-peat' - even further out of reach, but it will also sour what was an excellent effort on behalf of Australian football.

Respect is something you earn, and that they earned Australian football after the three games in Brazil.

Respect is a word Newcastle Breakers coach Lee Sterrey has used over these last 15 months. He was adamant that he needed to 'bring back the respect' to the club.

That he has done.

Going into tomorrow's round 18 they sit deservedly in the top six in fifth spot. A run of two months without a loss gives the club the ideal platform for a finals finish.

And what a boost it would be for not only Newcastle but Australian soccer. If they can pull almost 8,000 to their Adelaide City Force game last Friday night (700 extra seats were provided) goodness knows what a finals match would bring.

Lee Sterrey deserves it, and the players deserve it.

Yet like Olympic, they face a tricky return against a side with great pride and history, tomorrow night at Hindmarsh. City needs a win to maintain the small amount of winning momentum they had built up.

Last Friday night's match against Carlton was a mixed night for Northern Spirit as we went down 1-0 after Troy Cranney was sent off in the 70th minute.

It was the second week in succession we have had to fight out the last 20 minutes of a match with 10 men and this time we couldn't do it, conceding a penalty in the 90th minute.

It was a match we didn't deserve to lose and we will be using the sour taste we had in our mouths to launch a quick revenge mission on Carlton at North Sydney Oval on Wednesday night.

Despite the loss Arnie and myself were very happy with a few things, especially the way we defended.

In our last two matches we have defended beautifully in open play.

The only goal we conceded against Perth came through a goalkeeper mistake by John Perosh, probably his first of the year, and last Friday night Carlton could only score via a penalty.

Both times we played a large portion of the game with just 10 men.

That can be put down to the way our back three have been playing with Matthew Bingley, Paul Bilokapic and Jack Sobczyk doing a fine job.

'Bingers' has adapted well to yet another change in position and has marshaled the troops well from sweeper with 'Billy' and Jack doing a great job as markers against two sides who have scored a lot of goals this year, Perth and Carlton.

Our problem, as it was last year, has been scoring goals and Arnie and I have given the strikers and midfielders a free reign to show more initiative and be more inventive when we line up against Carlton at North Sydney Oval on Wednesday night.

The guys have been told to try things and break from our pattern to unlock the Carlton defence.

Arnie has two decisions to make before Wednesday night's game with Troy Cranney suspended and John Perosh once again available after he missed Friday night's match.

At this stage either Robbie Enes, who has recovered from a hamstring injury, or Adam Griffiths will play in the midfield alongside Michael Cunico and Robbie Slater.

A decision on whether to stick with Paul Henderson, who played well against Carlton, or put John Perosh back into the side, will not be made until the morning of the match as both guys have claims on the position.

Whoever gets the nod in goals, we are hoping they have quiet night as we go about extracting some revenge on Carlton in front of our fans at North Sydney Oval on Australia Day.

ON THE BUSES

Was it a bad omen? Falcons' bus left their hotel on Saturday night at 6pm bound for Parramatta Stadium ... or so they thought! When approaching the tollgates on the M4 one of the party asked politely, "Driver, where are we going?" The reply was, "Stadium Australia?". It took Gippsland Falcons 30 mins to get to the stadium, a trip that should have only taken 5-7 minutes. They were beaten 4-0. Memo to NSL team managers: Ask your driver before you leave hotel has he got inside Soccer's fixture list?

HONKERS?

Bernd Hong has received an offer from Hange Kong? He spent the free weekend talking with Glory about his future. And Bobby Depotovski's now being courted by Marconi for 2000/2001?

STEPTOE AND DAUGHTER

Did you know that Oceania's representative to FIFA, Charlie 'Steptoe' Dempsey's daughter is the General Secretary of the said OFC? Obviously no glass ceiling there! Dempsey of course is the man who said that having hairdryers and games of draughts at the Oceania youth academy was "all a young boy could wish for...". He also didn't know the capital of NZ when writing in their own rag 'The Wave'. For a precis of the 'embarrassing' OFC qualifiers for WCC 2000, read Sitter, the fanzine. Don't you love being part of Oceania?

STICCA LASHES NZ FA

Carlton Chairman Lou Sticca has aimed a broadside at the NZFA for calling up Carlton's Kiwi defenders, Mark Atkinson and Sean Douglas. To further compound his troubles, Sean Douglas injured his wrist by colliding with a photographer, and is in doubt indefinitely. "They called our players up for mickey mouse games against sides like Jamaica, long before their next World Cup qualifiers. We opposed it but FIFA overruled us. I just got off the phone after giving them a piece of my mind. It's indicative of Oceania's way of thinking this sort of thing. If you notice we did not buy Olyroo players this year, we want players who will be available to play for Carlton, and what has happened with NZ will influence our thinking when buying players in the future," said the Carlton boss.

GRAPHIC REMINDER OF DRUG USE

For those who didn't see Diego Maradona on TV last week, you were the lucky ones. The once-great one has gone to Cuba to seek help in overcoming his drug problems. But to see him so overweight and speaking in such a slurred and slow manner is heartbreaking. We prefer to remember him circa 1986, when he was at the peak of his powers. Very very sad indeed and a perfect example of why drugs are so reviled in society.

HEAVENLY NAME

The Youth Academy director at English Premier League side Southampton - nicknamed the Saints - is John Saintly. We're not joking.

ALL WORK AND NO PLAY AT SOCAUS

That's if you're a "sheila"! The glass ceiling well and truly exists at Soccer Australia. Not only is Publicity Manager, Rozanna Bozabalian, not allowed to travel overseas with the various national teams - including when the Joeys and the Young Socceroos played in World Cup tournaments - but neither is the Administrator of the national team, Bonnie Mersiades, able to travel with the Socceroos overseas. Too bad for Rozanna that while her media clients get to tournaments in places like New Zealand and Nigeria, she's left waiting to put out media releases at unearthly times back in Oz. Too bad also that SocAus nonetheless sees fit to pay for certain well-connected journalists to travel overseas at their expense. Too bad also for Bonnie that her economy class air fare to accompany the Socceroos to Chile and Hungary was deemed to be too much when she's the one who deals with overseas and local clubs and players all the time; or that she's the only national team administrator in the Australian set-up who doesn't get to travel with her team - and, coincidentally, she's the only female doing such a role in this country. IS believes that if everyone at SocAus worked as well as Rozanna and Bonnie, our national body would be in much better shape. Maybe that's why the men in charge see fit to keep them at home? Can we have a comment please?

POWER CREDIT UNION AND PARRA POWER

Did you know that you can buy merchandise (balls, replica shirts, sweat-shirts) at the Power Credit Union offices in Parramatta? Well now you do.

STUDS UP: THE MILLENNIUM ISSUE

Studs Up is one of the best fanzines ever produced in Australian fanzine history. It's written by the fans and for the fans of Australian Soccer. Now before the cynics say 'but their editor writes for you', which is true, it still does not hide the fact that this is a bloody good read. It's out now, see ad in this issue for how you can get a copy. Highly recommended and good value too.

SPIRIT FANS TRUE FANS?

S-news had the pleasure of giving some promotional copies of IS to Spirit fans at the Power v Falcons game. Quizzed as to why they were there (they had their Spirit shirts on, as you do) they said: "We support Australian Soccer." Perfect sentiment going into our national day.

THE SQUIRREL GRIP THAT ENRAGED FALCONS

Falcons fans have been calling IS to let us know of their disgust over the recent red card of Manny Gotis. It may be another case of the referee missing the action. Gotis was given a vicious squirrel grip (Oxford English Dictionary: to grab the testicles of another NSL player and give them a good squeeze, causing victim immense pain) by an (unnamed) Strikers player (we know who). For his trouble, Gotis' push back got him a second yellow. Apparently the Striker couldn't look Gotis in the eye at the after-match dinner, a sure sign of guilt. Gotis had the marks on his crown jewels for a week to prove it!

WOLVES FANS SPEAK OUT

It was good to speak with one of Wollongong Wolves' biggest fans, Sandro, last week. He said Wolves supporters were now sending letters in to newspapers on the south coast urging supporters to get behind what is arguably the most exciting team in the league. Sandro also says "Inside Soccer is the best paper for fans of Aussie Soccer. I hang out for it every Tuesday." Cheers!

ALTERATION TO ROUND ONE CLASH IN VPL

The Victorian Premier League is about to start (see IS preview next week), and the Fed has advised us that the round one game on Saturday Feb 5 between Altona Magic and St Albans Saints has been moved to the Altona East Phoenix SC ground with an arvo kick-off of 4.00/6.00PM. # LOOK OUT CARLTON

predicts confident Hendo

By Aidan Ormond

Never mind the narrow 1-0 loss to Carlton last Friday night, Spirit keeper Paul 'Hendo' Henderson believes his side has turned the corner and he has issued this prediction to Carlton on the eve of their return bout at North Sydney tomorrow night.

"We can beat them because of our great home support. Over the last few weeks the team has played much better, and we played quite well against Carlton last Friday but they scored very late from a penalty after a red card to Troy Cranney. A draw would have been a fair result.

"To our fantastic fans I say, be patient ... we have the quality of players to make the six, no doubt and we can definitely beat Carlton tomorrow night," predicted an upbeat Henderson.

Last Friday night's game (see Kevin Christopher's match report on page 13) also saw another poor display by the man in the middle.

"All we ask for is consistency. If a player is not consistent then he gets dropped," said Henderson, who was rated as one of the best on ground.

Coach Graham Arnold backed up this assessment of the referee. Arnold was quoted as saying the "refereeing was consistent ... consistently bad."

Meanwhile Northern Spirit is lucky to have such depth in its goal-keeping ranks, with Henderson coming in for John Perosh, who has had an outstanding season for the NSL big guns after initially displacing Henderson early on in this campaign. Then there's Jess Van Strattan, one of the stars of last year's World Cup Final Joeys.

It is unclear at this stage which keeper will get the nod for the Carlton game now that Perosh is available again.

"I'm not too sure if I will play. JP's (John Perosh) been playing very well and I have big boots to fill. I would love to be playing tomorrow night at North Sydney ... we'll just have to see," said Henderson.

"The team spirit in our camp is really good.

"If you look at teams like Perth Glory, they too struggled in year two but they are stronger now than ever before. Spirit is a very strong club that will be around for many years."

One player almost certain to play however is Carlton's Lubo Lapsansky. Henderson has tipped the little Blues midfielder to be the one most likely to cause Spirit damage.

"Lapsansky is their strong point, Carlton is physical and all-round very solid with strong defenders like Scottish international Dave McPherson, but Lubo can cause us damage from midfield."

And for those who may have thought that time out from the Spirit first team has dampened Henderson's enthusiasm, think again. The former Sutherland Shark is still in love with the life of a pro-footballer.

"It's fantastic. It's the best life. We train once or twice a day. I usually travel in with Paul Wearne to North Sydney, train in the morning and have lunch at North Sydney Leagues.

"In the afternoon we normally do specialist keeper training and we are home by 5.30pm. It's a sweet life, so there are no complaints from me when you do the thing you love.

"I am only 23 so I have plenty of time."

Henderson's attitude has been exemplary during his time away from the spotlight of regular first-team football. He is a model professional who should be in the game for many years. Right now

Paul Henderson: whether he plays or Perosh gets the nod, he is confident Spirit will deliver three points to their fans.

though, he will settle for a win against Carlton tomorrow night.

In Spirit news ... there will be a special pre-match game before the Carlton fixture on Australia Day this Wednesday.

Current Socceroo coach Frank Farina OAM (see story page 24) will lead an all-star Aussie side that will include former greats Joe Watson, Peter Katholos, Tony Pezzano, Gary Van Egmond, Rob Wheatley, Gerry Gomez, Tom McCulloch and Jim Patikas.

They will play a Rest of the World selection that will feature Alex McPherson and former Southampton player Mike Berry. It starts at 6pm.

Spirit is hoping for a repeat of last year when 17,722 turned up for the Australia Day encounter.

GREG BLAKE
C7 SOCCER COMMENTATOR
E-mail: gblake@primus.com.au

I've got to say that I'm staggered at the amount of criticism that continues to be reserved for Sydney Olympic star and Olyroo skipper, Brett Emerton.

Most of it, mind, from his own local Sydneysiders.

And most of it delivered through the back door, either whispered in passing or mentioned discreetly over a quiet coffee.

Actually it's kind of funny to watch the same idiots who were sticking knives into the big bloke's back a few seconds beforehand play the fawning, pathetic 'give us an interview' types to his face.

His club coach, Branko Culina, is well aware of the pressure on Emerton to perform and 'Emo's not an idiot, he knows he's in the gunsights as well.

I had a go at drawing him on the issues of weight of expectation during the recent Olyroo series in Adelaide, but he dismissed it all with a laconic shrug of the shoulders.

I think he'd rather just get on with playing footy, but I'm sure he's wearing it all a little too hard.

Which is not at all fair.

Despite having to carry the millstone of being 'the next big thing' since he strode into senior footy in 1996 under then coach David Ratcliffe, Emerton has produced more than enough to validate his standing at club and international level.

And he's a kid, for goodness sakes.

At just 20 he can and still probably will be anything.

And 'Emo' if they don't appreciate you in your own back yard, head due south and you'll walk into any team you'd care to sign for.

At half-time this NSL season is still very much alive, but don't be surprised if the long-predicted Perth onslaught doesn't overwhelm the competition as the season bowls along towards the business end.

Brisbane are treading water, Olympic is off the boil and Carlton might be there or thereabouts, but they've not won the games that count against the clubs likely to be in contention at finals time.

Newcastle and Wollongong are giving us some much-needed romance, but the Breakers and Wolves simply don't win silverware.

In contrast, Perth Glory are looking very scary indeed.

Offensively venomous, sound at the back, invincible at home and now boasting Jason Petkovic to ice the cake, Perth is now the consensus favorite to take the NSL title to WA for the first time.

If they get top two and a couple of home finals, put down your glasses.

Everything about the equation is starting to equal Perth.

Their list goes very deep; the average age is a balanced 25 or so and with ten 100-plus gamers the Glory roster boasts a wealth of experience.

They've stayed pretty healthy thus far and going into the second half of the season the sun continues to shine on the Sandgropers, with the likes of Vinko Buljasic and Peter Buljan beating injuries and ready to rock 'n roll.

It's a good side and so long as the somewhat eclectic mix of personalities within the squad stay focused on the team goal, Bernd Stange's side is the one to watch.

All being well, Carlton's Andrew Marth should become the NSL's thirtieth 300-gamer around about round 20.

And the former back-to-back premiership captain of the Melbourne Knights is only a couple of goals from recording his 50th NSL strike, which ain't half bad for a bloke who has spent a huge chunk of his career at the defensive end of the pad-dock.

A couple of weeks later South Melbourne skipper, Paul Trimboli, should break that club's long-standing games record of 338, currently held by former Soccerroo Steve Blair.

Trimboli has already played over 350 career games and is three goals off his century.

While Carlton's much-travelled John Markovski has already passed the 300-game and 100-goal double milestone, achieved only twice before him in NSL history.

I mention this merely for the forgotten common link between all three, that they all came through the ranks at, and started their senior footy with, former NSL club, Sunshine George Cross.

Clubs like St George and Sydney United are often lauded for their contribution to the NSL through junior development, but the Georgies certainly did their bit for the game when the trio of Markovski, Trimboli and Marth came off that club's production line during the 1980s.

Although the Georgies made up the numbers for most of their eight-year stay at NSL level (1984 through 1990/91), even in the club's final season they had some talent going around.

That year they debuted some notable home-growners like Frank Talia and Lorenz Kindtner, and also going around for the club in 1990/91 were guns in the mould of Fausto De Amicis, Craig and Paul Foster, Troy Cranney and Damian Mori.

Kind of makes you wonder why they were so crappy, doesn't it?

Apparently the sagely, wise old heads at Adelaide Force took some slight offence when this publication and gung-ho editor, Aidan Ormond, took that club to task over several issues some time back.

At the time the Adelaide club had just lost CEO Ned Coton and was showing a propensity for making some outwardly regressive decisions, such as the obvious one, to re-name the recently re-named Adelaide Force to a more traditional Adelaide City Force.

But while the club leaders bristled and blustered about the adverse publicity, I now know first hand that the rank and file were cheering 'Inside Soccer' along, all the way.

I've been fortunate enough to make a few mates in Adelaide over the years and I managed to catch up with several during the Olyroo series recently.

One of them, by the way, has tossed more than a few lazy pennies into the Adelaide Force coffers over the years and will pull the pin in protest, sooner rather than later.

The die-hards are furious at what they see is the dangerous direction the board is taking, what with the league set to be cut by four and a still red-hot Adelaide United bid ready to drop some rubber on the starting grid for the 2000/2001 season.

Which beckons the question as to who are the board actually representing, because they sure as heck have their own members rattled?

Just to prove beyond doubt that I helped put the anal in analyst, what a season Tommy Pondeljak is having at Sydney United.

At the start of the season I hardly rated Pondeljak in the list of the close-season's best transfers, but come mid-year and the former Melbourne Knights best-and-fairest winner has probably been as good as any going around in new colours.

Pondeljak was superb for a couple of seasons at Somers Street, but he appeared to be going through the motions a bit last summer and the off-season move to re-building Sydney United beckoned as more of the same for the 24-year old.

David Ratcliffe's team haven't set the world on fire, but Pondeljak has well and truly shown a new-found maturity by putting his hand up and actively trying to lead United out of the wilderness.

To date Pondeljak hasn't missed a game and has been in United's best three players in many more games than he hasn't.

It's the toughest of asks to re-ignite the flame in a team not travelling well, but Tommy's done it the hard way and deserves a huge amount of credit.

I understand the news on Pondeljak's veteran teammate Vel Kupresak isn't so good however, with the only recently crowned Sydney United club games record holder sidelined with a knee injury that might spell career end.

You hope not, because champs deserve to choose their own time to go.

C7 colleague and former South Melbourne champion himself, Paul Wade, did make an intriguing observation during the latter part of the World Club Championship, following his old club's exit from the series.

Wade believes that South Melbourne's approach to the series was not unlike that of Australian international teams to big games during his early years of wearing the green and gold, when he believes far too much respect was paid to the opposition.

"Instead of playing to strengths, often we'd go out too preoccupied with trying to hold out for a result, or at least try and limit the damage they could do," he said.

"I just don't think South Melbourne played anywhere near as well as they could have and as well as we've seen them, and maybe they shouldn't have been so reverential to the teams they played."

Apparently the lack of faith in South Melbourne's ability to even survive the WCC with some degree of credibility was not restricted to local harbingers of doom either.

As South Melbourne lined up in the players' tunnel before their first game at the Maracana, the story is that Fausto De Amicis, no mug when it comes to the Italian lingo, overheard an Italian on the officiating team for that game telling his comrades that "this lot (South Melbourne) are going to get hammered by six or seven."

Despite public persona suggesting the contrary, apparently Newcastle Breakers coach, Lee Sterrey, is in fact a complete bastard.

The wire services reported that following his club's record-breaking 3-2 win over league leader Sydney Olympic Sterrey was to "reward his players with horror beach runs."

"I'll slaughter the players this week with beach runs in heavy sand and then get back to ball work next week. I'll make sure it doesn't go to their heads," Sterrey is reported as saying.

Sterrey has allegedly confided to senior club officials that should the Breakers make the top six it's compulsory training at the local dog pound, through the confines of which players will be required to carry out a series of sprints wearing nothing but lamb chop necklaces.

"That should sharpen their evasive skills," Sterrey supposedly explained.

And a grand final win?
"What better than a group booking for this year's Hawaiian Ironman event. That'll teach 'em a bit of humility."

Steve Laybutt tangles with an Egyptian striker during the Olyroo games in Adelaide. Australia won 1-0.

By Aidan Ormond

Steve Laybutt made his Australian TV debut as a sideline comments man for C7 during the Olyroo v South Korea game at Hindmarsh Stadium. He is also set to make another debut when he steps out onto the park in the much-anticipated Parramatta Power v Northern Spirit clash this Saturday night. If his injury has healed, it should be his home debut.

"Yeah it was enjoyable, I've never done TV work before and working with Ivan Zelic, Blakey and Wadey was fun," said Power's new signing.

With Richard Plesa and now Laybutt Parramatta truly has a 'Power' defence going into the second half of the season; Olyroo Laybutt is delighted to have joined such a big club.

"It's very professional and I'm really looking forward to this Spirit game, the atmosphere should be excellent," he said after his first official training session with Parramatta last Friday (his medial ligaments injury prevented him from a full workout.)

STEVE LAYBUTT

Home debut this Saturday night

He is rated only a possibility of playing tomorrow night (Wed.) at Falcons.

"I went on loan to Bellmare Hiratsuka for six months during the off-season here. The club is about 1.5 hrs from Tokyo. It was very professional and the league is strong so it has helped me as a player.

"It's good to play different styles of soccer, and playing in the J-league will help me in the long run."

After an Olyroo friendly against Japan last year Laybutt's agent followed up on interest to gain the strapping defender the short-term agreement.

Another Asian superpower - South Korea - has just played, and run rings around, the Olyroos. Laybutt saw them close up and was impressed.

"The South Koreans have always been fairly strong, but the Japanese are also getting much better. Look at their U/20s, who made the final of Nigeria '99 (where the Young Socceroos made an inglorious exit in the group stage.)

"Obviously the Japanese youth system is strong ... I wouldn't say they are heaps ahead of us here, but the fact that most of their players stay local obviously helps them a lot.

"And I was quite surprised at how big the Japanese players have become," said the burly defender.

"Living in Japan was easier because Chay Hews (now back in Brisbane) was sharing with me, but not too many speak English, then again, I was only there a short time. I had a translator for when my Japanese coach was talking, in fact, I might need one for Lawrie McKinna here at Power!

"I did want to stay in Japan an extra 12 months, three clubs were interested but the date passed so I could not make the Jan 1 deadline.

"Power is a strong squad, I have seen them play a couple of times when I have been back here on holiday. I think that maybe they have been a bit unlucky. Defensively I hope I can help out," said the 22-year-old former Wolves and Brisbane Strikers player.

Laybutt strained his medial ligament the night before the Korea v Olyroo game, putting off his planned Parra debut on January 22 against Falcons. Logically, though, the future for the defender would be England. He agrees.

"England would probably suit my style but because I am full on Australian with no UK ancestry, it may be difficult with the paperwork. It will depend on how many Socceroo games I can get under my belt first ... I may have to try Belgium to help me get to England."

At the end of this Australian season - when his contract with Power expires - he may head back to Japan, or "it may be a good time to go to Europe...., who knows," reflected the Wollongong-born stopper.

Laybutt, who is going away with the Socceroos in February, is likely to miss even more games before his contract is up at the end of the season; there is a European Olyroo camp in March.

"Obviously I would like to play more games for Power, but national team duties come first."

"I may have to get a translator for Lawrie McKinna," joked Laybutt.

Laybutt is raring to go for his new club and wants to make the most of his opportunities here. The club has made a shrewd signing and they are just happy that he is finally able to put on a Power shirt.

IT'S PARADISIS FOR SHARKS BUT EASTS' HELL CONTINUES

EASTERN SUBURBS 0
SUTHERLAND SHARKS 1

Paradisi 53

Sunday night at David Phillips Field, Sydney.

By Peter Smith

Eastern Suburbs disastrous start to the season continued on Sunday night when they went down to Sutherland Sharks 1-0 at David Phillips Field.

Despite being many pundits dark horses for a successful season, Easts have now lost their opening three games, all at home.

This was in truth a poor game exemplified by profligate finishing from both teams. However, the blustery conditions, bumpy pitch and some curious decisions from the match officials didn't help to raise the game as a spectacle either.

Yavuz Ekinici had the first chance of the game when he picked up a loose ball just inside the box but his shot clipped the bar with Dennes Olla in the Sutherland goal well beaten.

Just a minute later Matt Merralls pushed his shot just wide from 20 yards as Easts keeper Con Anastasiadis advanced to close down the angle in a one on one. Next it was Sutherland's turn to hit the bar when Adam Daley hit the bar with a header mid way through the first stanza.

Possibly the best chance of the game fell to ex Shark Peter Pulicino who saved his former club's blushes after a defensive mix up allowed him an unchallenged shot from 12 yards but he volleyed narrowly wide.

Further chances before the halftime break to Easts Ben Deighan and Sutherland's Craig Hobbs were not converted and the teams went into the sheds without anything to show for their efforts.

The only goal of the game arrived after 53 minutes and it took a freak incident to get the scoreboard attendant active.

Sutherland's Con Paradisi drilled a free kick from all off 30 yards against the frame of the goal only for the ball to ricochet back onto the shoulder of Anastasiadis, who had been left rooted to the spot some five yards out from goal, and into the net.

The second half continued in much the same vein as the first with both teams squandering chances but neither really gaining any sort of ascendancy although Sutherland could claim to have had more territorial dominance.

For Sutherland Con Paradisi played well in the centre of midfield while captain Eddie Giraldo marshalled his defence well for their first clean sheet of the season.

For the home team Malcolm Nicholls give everything but coach John Calleja will be hoping the return of highly regarded striker Jim Aschner from suspension will help to alleviate their problems in front of goal.

Their match away to Fairfield Bulls will see something give as they are only two teams yet to pick up a point this season.

Sutherland on the other hand are in the top five for the first time since Round 4 1997 but will need more steadiness in front of goal next Saturday at home to the frugal Bankstown City if the are to maintain that position.

St George stunned both the healthy crowd and the hitherto unbeaten Canterbury-Marrickville with a 4-0 trouncing at St George Stadium last Friday night. In doing so the Saints showed that they will be a genuine force to be reckoned in 2000.

Looking strong all over the park St George played an impressive possession game working hard off the ball yet maintaining their intensity for the full 90 minutes.

The first half was played at considerable pace with the humid conditions taking its toll on some players who struggled later in the game. Neither team was able to gain the ascendancy with few clear cut chances created.

Shots from St George's Jim Bakis and Achilles Markopolous flew narrowly wide whilst the Berries best chance was a sizzling Jose Mendes long range effort which was tipped over the bar.

Ten minutes into the second half came what was probably the games turning point. Canterbury midfielder Patrick Galloway fed the ball through to Jimmy Nikas who skipped away from the Saints defence before nimbly rounding advancing keeper Stacy Alogdellis only to fire his shot against the underside of the crossbar with just a still retreating Saints defender to beat.

Just ten minutes later Saints impressive former English professional Mark Brennan showed his class when a loose ball fell to him just outside the box and he rifled an unstoppable shot past Frank Mikuletic in the Canterbury goal.

If that didn't halt Canterbury's claim on the game the second goal just three minutes certainly did. Stefan Janic's low

Patrick Galloway had a chance for the Berries a few minutes later but after that Canterbury were unable to match St George's intensity and it was no surprise when the Saints rounded off the game with two more goals.

Simon Verrinder and Angelo Petratos exchanged passes in a lovely sweeping move on 86 minutes before the later finished with a smart low drive into the far corner for 3-0.

Two minutes into injury time striker Jim Bakis showed a real striker's instinct by pouncing as the Berries defence hesitated over a long ball and he scored his third of the season to complete the rout.

Demons fail to fire as Manly collects point

MANLY WARRINGAH 0 BLACKTOWN DEMONS 0

Saturday night at Cromer Park, Manly.

Blacktown defenders Paul Yates coming to the rescue in the 16th minute and three minutes later Damien Foxe, returning to the Demons' line-up after missing last week's game with a groin strain.

The second half was a much closer encounter with Blacktown's reserve 'keeper Nathan Reid, standing in for the suspended Fernando Greco, twice denying McGuire.

Without injured star forward Jason Bennett, out with severe bruising of the ribs, Blacktown struggled to get control inside their opponent's goal area and in the end it was the Dolphins who came closest to snaring the three points, twice hitting the woodwork.

In the 62nd minute Jeremy Pettenton, signed by Manly from Leichhardt Tigers, saw his header nudge the crossbar and with five minutes of the match remaining, Martin Ranaldi pounced on a Blacktown defensive lapse but then watched disappointingly as his shot cannoned off the bottom of the upright.

In his after match summation, Demons' coach Brian Brown paid credit to Manly's dogged performance.

"We fell into their trap in the second half - they ran harder and chased harder and we hurried our game."

The Demons' reserves recorded their second win of the season getting up 2-1 with two thunderous hits from Roland Weber and Adam Kwasnik.

This Saturday it's the turn of another promoted side, Penrith Panthers, to do battle with Blacktown City, kicking off at the Gabbie Stadium at 7pm.

Blacktown City Demons failed to take advantage of their first half dominance, drawing nil-all againsts newly promoted Manly Warringah Dolphins in the round three NSW Super League clash at Cromer Park last Saturday evening.

Manly's coach, the vociferous Tony Pezzano, admitted after the game that the Dolphins intended to sit back for the first ten minutes of the game to draw the Demons' sting but he didn't expect them to be under the hammer for most of the first half.

However, for all their first period superiority, Blacktown only forced one save from a direct shot on goal, a blistering drive in the 36th minute from Naoki Ima, making his first start this season.

With Mark Hagger's first minute header just shaving the outside of the post and Paul Dee's three long range efforts flying just over the bar in the first ten minutes, it looked as though Blacktown's opening goal was only going to be a matter of when rather than if.

Close efforts from Paul Richardson in the 9th minute and Damien Brown in the 26th minute added to this belief but in this instance near enough wasn't good enough.

In fact Manly's best player on the day, forward Scott McGuire, twice broke away and nearly scored against the run of play. He was foiled on both occasions by the timely intervention of

Super League summary round 3

On Saturday there were four matches with wins for Bonnyrigg, Leichhardt and Parramatta, with Manly sharing the spoils with Blacktown (see match report on this page.)

Bonnyrigg White Eagles needed a goal from Michael Hawrysiuk six minutes into stoppage time to defeat the dogged Macarthur Rams 1-0 at the Serbian Centre.

Leichhardt Tigers continue to star at the top of the ladder with another come from behind win away from home, this time aided by a penalty from Steve Karavatakis to win against Fairfield Bulls at Nineveh Field 2-1.

Hoenselaars had put the Bulls a goal up, but the Tigers drew level with a superb strike from James Stubbs-Mills after lead-up work by Yane Talceviski.

The Tigers played some awesome football, according to their coach Les de Celis and when Mite Talceviski was hacked down inside the box Karavatakis made no mistake from the spot.

It was not the first penalty of the day to be claimed by the marauding Leichhardt, but other appeals were denied.

Penrith Panthers were hammered 5-0 by Parramatta Eagles with Scott Xuereb getting the visitors ahead just before the break.

Another goal soon after the restart by Nikolce Joseski, who added the third as well, and then Adam Anderson and Anthony Mittiga scored later, turning it into a rout at the finish.

With Canterbury beaten, anything other than a Central Coast win at Bankstown would have seen Leichhardt go to a clear lead at the top.

Bankstown Lions had Grozdanovski sent off against Central Coast after a scoreless first half, yet took the lead through Nabil Codmani midway through the second.

The Coasties then equalised with a Peter Preston penalty to make it 1-1 at the finish.

Coast remains unbeaten, but are now two points behind Leichhardt Tigers, the only side to win all three of their opening games.

TONY POPOVIC: "I would like to play in Bundesliga after J-league"

Tony Popovic: Looking to Europe after the J-league.

By John Vrtaric

The exodus of Australia's finest footballers over the last 15 or so years has seen most of them head for the riches available in the mecca of football, Europe.

Some, though, have ventured closer to our shores with a number of Aussies playing in the more lucrative Malaysia and Singapore leagues while a few have graced the fledgling professional league in Japan.

Tony Popovic is one these pioneers - for the last three years the elegant defender has been showcasing his talents for Sanfrecce Hiroshima FC in the J-League. Along with Graham Arnold, Popovic followed former national team coach Eddie Thompson who had joined the Japanese outfit towards the end of the 1996.

Popovic and Arnold arrived in January of the following year.

Popovic has been blessed with exquisite timing as far as his career has been concerned.

He has been fortunate enough to be part of two of the greatest teams that Australia has produced - the '91 Young Socceroo and the '92 Olyroo squads. Both just missed out on the bronze medals losing their respective matches for third position.

The late 80's and early 90's was witness to the emergence of the talent laden Croat-Australian footballers sprouting from the production lines of Sydney Croatia and Melbourne Croatia. Popovic's contemporaries include Mark Babic, Zeljko Kalac and Mark Bosnich.

They made their debuts in the inaugural summer season of 1989-90 with both Babic and Kalac starting the first game of the season against South Melbourne while Popovic, aged 16, was on the bench.

Although the 193 centimetre tall Popovic played stopper in his junior days he started out as a left back with Sydney Croatia.

"When I first started I played left back and at sixteen you don't complain, you play where you get put, we had guys like Mark Jones and Alan Hunter playing in central defence."

The Syd Utd youngsters blossomed over the next two seasons and together with Robbie Stanton and the now Man Utd player Bosnich, were part of the Young Socceroos' campaign in Portugal '91.

Popovic's playing time in Portugal was limited in the three group games - each game he came off the bench with Preston's Robert Stojcevski being preferred in the left full back position and Babic partnering captain Paul Okon in the centre of the defence.

Australia won all three of its group games, including a superb one goal (a spectacular effort by Brad Maloney) win over Russia, to top the Group C table.

He didn't play at all in the quarter final win on penalties against Syria but was more than compensated with a full game for the next match.

And what a match that was. Playing the semi-final against the host nation in front of over 112,000 Popovic and his team-mates performed superbly, going down to a spectacular long-range goal from Rui Costa.

The play-off game for the third spot against Russia proved to be even closer than the group game and after a 1-1 draw, with David Seal scoring his third goal of the tournament; it came down to penalties again.

Popovic converted Australia's fifth penalty but unfortunately Stanton missed the next one and Russia edged out the Aussies for third spot.

Popovic reminisced about that tournament, "we had a top team, with Mark Bosnich and Paul Okon, it's something that I will always remember."

It wasn't long before Popovic scaled the heights again - Australia qualified for the '92 Barcelona Olympics after THAT goal from Ned Zelic against Holland and Popovic was one of the youngest players selected for the Games.

Although he didn't accumulate much playing time he did make an appearance late in the tournament as the Olyroos made the world fully aware of football in Australia with another semi-final appearance. Having lost the semi to Poland they again went home empty-handed with a loss for third place to Ghana.

Upon his return to Australia Popovic became part of a Sydney United team that over the next few years went on to establish themselves as one of the best teams of the 90s.

With Popovic and Babic eventually paired as twin stoppers they formed the nucleus of a strong defence that took the team to the brink of the top six in 92-93 and then into the finals for the next four years. In 96-97 the Branko Culina era ended with United crowned minor premiers, by nine points, but losing a historic grand final to Brisbane Strikers in front of over 40,000 fans.

Popovic didn't make that grand final as he had already departed for his adventure to Japan. And for a 23 year old moving to a country like Japan was indeed an adventure.

"It was a big shock at first and it took me three months to get used to, but having Graham Arnold, whom I got to know at Sydney Croatia before he went overseas, was a great help."

Happily married to long-time sweetheart Manda (who, according to Tony, while away her time going to the gym and spending Tony's hard earned money!) Popovic is coming towards the end of his contract with Hiroshima and looking for fresh challenges.

Ending his overseas career in Europe would be something that appeals to Popovic - "I wouldn't mind going to a country like Germany."

That and another top four finish with the full national team in the World Cup would round off a dream career for the talented Aussie defender.

Valsport/Falcons partnership to continue

By Aidan Ormond

Italian Soccer bootmaker Valsport is strongly expected to continue its association this season with NSL side Gippsland Falcons. Talks are being held at the moment but an announcement is due in the next few weeks and should be related to junior development for the Falcons.

Last season Gippsland used the Valsport boots and, according to defender Manny Gotis, "they are excellent boots. I highly recommend them. We would like to help Valsport increase its profile in this country because it is a quality product."

Falcons officials were "delighted" to be in negotiations with Valsport, and believed it showed that the club was "on the move" in Australian soccer.

Golsport is the exclusive distributor of Valsport boots in Australia and New Zealand - the oldest soccer company in the world (established in 1920 and based in Padova.)

"Valsport believes Gippsland is very important because it is such a strong soccer area, and regional Australia is just as important as the city. So, with Gippsland Falcons, the flagship NSL side of the region, it was perfect for us," said David Magrone (pictured), MD of exclusive Valsport distributors Golsport.

Their top of the range boots were recently reviewed in Soccer International magazine, and were given an unequivocal thumbs up. Inside Soccer agrees after seeing and trying them ourselves.

They are very comfortable, have new technology studs design and instep and have the seal of approval not only from the Falcons, but also from Italian stars Roberto di Matteo, Costacurta and new Valsport signing Marco Delvecchio, one of the Serie A's new stars.

Valsport is also planning to move into team kits and casual wear, as well as junior boots, basic senior boots as well as training equipment, which should be available at the end of the year.

"Valsport is a company solely dedicated to Soccer," said Magrone.

"In the next ten years our vision is to be knocking on the door of the big boys and taking market share."

"Anything to do with soccer we want to be able to supply. With equipment and clothing we feel we can do so much and right now our suppliers are real happy with the progress we have made here in Australia in just 18 months."

"I am sure with the quality of this product we will reach the status we deserve to reach," added Magrone.

Valsport will have a presence at a large trade fair in Munich, where Valsport's clothing range will be launched in Europe. Valsport boots are available at the following in Australia.

THE FORGOTTEN STRIKER?

Marconi Stallions' Sean Babić

By Roger Sleeman

As the sporting world reflects on the stalemate in the World Club Championship final between Vasco Da Gama and Corinthians, there is a timely reminder that the curse that pervades modern football; i.e. the tactics employed by coaches to avoid defeat at all costs must be reversed. This match must have delivered a message to the self-professed guardians of Brazilian football in Australia that they must depart from their narrow-minded view of football and open their eyes to the real meaning of the game.

From this sporting non-event there is a clear lesson for the Australian game; that the paying public wants to see attacking football with the emphasis on scoring while providing a stage for talented players to entertain.

Sean Babić, the Marconi striker, is one player who fits this mould. Surprisingly we have been fortunate to retain him in the NSL but realistically how long will he stay in Australia?

In this interview with Roger Sleeman Babić discusses life in the NSL his Socceroo experiences and his views on the state of the game in Australia.

ROGER SLEEMAN: They say strikers are born not made. Does this apply to you?

SEAN BABIĆ: I believe there's some truth in the theory. When I played for sy. Can you explain the background to this?

S.B. I was scoring goals in the trials but for some unknown reason Les Scheinflug didn't select me. The only conclusion I could draw was that as an individual player I wasn't a player who could fit into his team plan.

However, I was also told by the Sydney United coach Branko Culina it would be better if I wasn't selected because the club was already losing Rudan, Vrkic and Plesa to the team. Culina also dropped me to the youth team which certainly didn't help my chances of selection.

R.S. Did these events influence your decision to leave Sydney United at the end of the 1995/96 season?

S.B. When a coach tells you it's more important to play for your club than representing your country it's time to move on.

My difference of opinion with Branko Culina was well documented during that season but not only for the events relating to the W.Y.C.

We weren't having a great season and the regular strikers Zdrilic and Milicic only scored sixteen goals between them. I was used mainly as a substitute in the last ten minutes of most games and still managed to score six goals.

Culina said he was trying to protect my slight physique so he preferred to use me as an impact player rather than for longer periods. At the end of the season I was out of contract so when Manfred Schaefer made an offer for me to sign with Marconi I couldn't leave Sydney United quickly enough.

R.S. Were you disappointed about not gaining a contract with Empoli during the 1996/97 season?

S.B. It wasn't only the failure to secure the contract that was a disappointment but the circumstances surrounding the episode. After Empoli had shown an interest in the tape Marconi had sent them they wanted me to go immediately to Italy for trials.

Unfortunately, Marconi and Schaefer didn't want me to go straight away and by the time I arrived six weeks later the club wasn't interested in signing me. Basically I wasted three weeks in Italy running around in the mud with no chance of getting a contract.

R.S. How do you compare the coaches you've played under in the NSL?

S.B. They've all had something to offer but in different ways.

Culina was a very tactically minded coach while Schaefer emphasised physical conditioning, team discipline and a strong defensive pattern in the back five.

Zoran Matic was a strong disciplinarian who emphasised team pattern rather than individual flair. He designed a clear tactical plan for each game and if you didn't follow it you were in trouble.

The role of the strikers was to allow space in the middle of the park for the midfielders to run into and attack the opponent's goal. These tactics explained the large number of goals Brad Maloney scored during the 1997/98 season.

One thing Matic didn't appreciate was players shooting outside the penalty area, a philosophy many coaches would find hard to understand.

Frank Farina is a player's coach and doesn't subscribe to complicated tactical plans. He likes players to express themselves where speed of thought and movement off the ball is paramount.

You could say that if Frank could attack all the time he would but now he's national coach he's become more conservative as evidenced in our displays against Brazil.

This season Eddie Krncevic has emphasised the technical side of the game. He focuses on one and two-touch football and building out of defence, rather than allowing the keeper to clear the ball downfield without finding a player.

He's also encouraging the players to use my speed off the ball as much as possible.

R.S. You were first selected in the Australian squad in 1997 for the four nations tournament against South Korea, New Zealand and Norway but didn't finally make your debut until November 1999 against Brazil. Are you content to be a squad player only?

S.B. I have to admit it was Raul Blanco who selected me originally because Terry Venables didn't know about me. Although I didn't play much under Venables I learned so much about striking from him.

I have to say if we had more coaches like him in Australia playing standards would forge ahead in leaps and bounds.

I would've liked to have used some of these methods in my club but the problem is the other players not having been exposed to them would find it hard to play with me.

The difficulty with gaining a spot in the Socceroos is the preference given to overseas players so the answer for me is to find an overseas club.

R.S. There are games you have played like the first round match against Parramatta Power where you were streets ahead of any player on the field yet you don't seem to receive the deserved recognition. Can you explain this?

S.B. It's a bit like asking why Ante Milicic, one of our most exciting youth players, hasn't really achieved his full potential in Europe.

Perhaps if I'd played with Viduka in "One thing Zoran Matic didn't appreciate was players shooting from outside the penalty area," says Sean Babić.

Qatar I may have secured an overseas contract but that's only supposition. Maybe the coaches in the higher echelon of Australian football don't regard the concept of the old fashioned centre forward who can outpace defences as relevant to the textbook tactics of modern day football?

Certainly injuries have played their part but like any striker worth his salt I always put 100% effort in so you're bound to pick up injuries.

R.S. Do you think Frank Farina will select you in the squad for the tournament in Chile and for the matches against Hungary and the Czech Republic and if you aren't selected will you try your luck overseas at the end of the season?

S.B. It all depends on the availability of the overseas players but I've also heard players like Chipperfield and Horsley have come into calculations.

Although I haven't played a lot lately due to suspension and injury Frank Farina knows what I can do so the call is all his. It will be interesting to see how many Olyroos he selects, especially in light of the disappointing performances in Adelaide at the Four Nations Tournament.

If I'm not chosen I will have to think very seriously about a move overseas. Although Marconi is looking after me I would like to play overseas and secure my future.

Marconi U/10s I finished 94 out of 180 goals scored in the season, proving I possessed a raw natural talent to be a successful striker.

However, the raw talent needs to be nurtured and it's important young strikers receive the right coaching at an early age to develop their full potential.

R.S. Who have been the most influential people in your career?

S.B. After playing U/11 to U/16 at Sydney United I was promoted to the Colts by Lee Sterrey. Sterrey was a great help to me and was instrumental in my elevation to the youth team at the age of 16.

Here I was playing in an U/19 competition with players like Milicic and Moric. However, it's Manfred Schaefer who I really owe most because he gave me the opportunity to play in the first team during the 1994/95 season. Fortunately his gamble paid dividends as I scored the winning goal in a 1-0 win against Brisbane.

AUSSIES on the world stage

A round-up of how our Aussies players fared abroad this last week ...

MOORE GOALS!

The Aussie presence in the English Premier League over the weekend was restricted to Mark Schwarzer's keeping goals for Middlesbrough and the 'wonder boy' Harry Kewell's Leeds played a top of the table clash against Sunderland.

Middlesbrough was attempting to get themselves out of a form slump when they visited Liverpool and with a tight defence and safe keeping from Schwarzer they managed to hold onto a 0-0 draw with the Aussie 'keeper playing a full game.

In the Leeds-Sunderland game Kewell, who has been in great goal scoring form of late, played a full game as Leeds had a 1-2 away win over Sunderland to retain the premiership lead over Manchester United.

Kewell had a relatively quiet game and was not able to maintain his recent goal scoring record.

The other Aussie 'keeper in the Premier League, Mark Bosnich, was seen in action over the weekend as his team, Manchester United, played the other big game of this round when they clashed with arch rivals Arsenal this morning (Tuesday).

Two other Australians were missing from their teams this weekend due to injury - Coventry's John Aloisi still out with a long term ailment while Richard Johnson missed Watford's slide down to last place on the ladder after a 3-2 loss away to Bradford.

In the Nationwide First Division the first match played on Friday featured a couple of Australians when Swindon, almost certainly doomed to the second division, was host to Crystal Palace.

Frank Talia - formerly of Sunshine Georgies in Melbourne - was in goals for the home team, who trail the second last spot team by six points. They were beaten by four goals to one. Craig Foster, a couple of weeks back from injury, returned to the Palace starting line-up to play the full ninety minutes and score a goal in the 55th minute. Both Steve Mautone and returned Olyroo Nick Rizzo remained on the bench for Crystal Palace.

John Filan's return to the Blackburn team last week lasted only a few minutes and he will most likely require a shoulder surgery although his team could have done with his services as their run toward the top came to a sudden halt - third placed Barnsley thrashed them 5-1.

Crewe Alexander's slide back down towards the relegation zone, after a mini revival, continued when they were beaten 2-3 at home by Walsall. Jason Kearon was in goals for the home team who are now only one point away from the relegation zone.

West Bromwich Albion, with Jason Van Blerk playing a full game, gave itself some breathing space with a 0-0 draw at Nottingham Forest. The one point puts them one above Crewe and only two points outside the relegation zone.

Stan Lazaridis continues his return from injury and he came on in the 59th minute as his team Birmingham City lost at Port Vale by three goals to one - their promotion aspirations are fading.

One team that is moving itself away from the relegation zone is Sheffield United who beat second placed Manchester City at home by one goal to nil with Shaun Murphy again a dominant figure in the heart of United's defence.

Danny Tiatto was in City's starting line-up and played the full game but received a yellow card whilst Olyroo Danny Allsopp was not included in City's squad.

In the Stockport 1-1 home draw with Portsmouth both Aussies Andy Petterson and Mike Panopoulos remained on the bench for the visitors.

In Wolverhampton's 3-2 home win over QPR Kevin Muscat again played a full game for the home team while Steve Corica wasn't included in the squad.

For QPR-Aussie George Kulscar he remained on the bench for the whole game.

In the Nationwide Division Two Reading was again defeated, 3-1 by Luton, with Andrew Bernal starting for Reading and being replaced in the 71st minute.

Meanwhile Millwall beat fellow promotion aspirants Stoke 1-0 and find themselves in fourth spot only five points behind leaders Wigan but having played one game more. Tim Cahill played the whole game but Lucas Neill wasn't part of Millwall's squad.

In the Scottish Premier League Rangers returned to the action after a short break with a resounding 5-0 win over Aberdeen and their two Aussies were very much in the thick of the actio.

Tony Vidmar and Craig Moore played the full game and both were booked.

Moore added to his excitement on the day by making the breakthrough in the 36th minute with a powerful header into the corner for only his second goal of the season following an inswinging corner from Giovanni van Bronckhorst.

In Celtic's 1-1 away draw with Kilmarnock Mark Viduka scored a goal in the 31st minute but the Bhoys are now relying on Rangers to lose matches as they are six points behind them and the leaders have a game in hand.

In Italy Paul Okon got onto the field in the 83rd minute as his team Fiorentina went down 1-0 away to Bari in a Serie A game.

Meanwhile in the Serie B Marco Bresciano came on in the 69th minute as Empoli drew 1-1 away to Fermana but compatriot Vince Grella wasn't included in the Empoli squad.

Craig Moore ... scored his second goal of the season and Rangers' opening goal.

Meanwhile in other news, a player about to become an Aussie Abroad is young Scott McDonald. The 16 year Joey was one the stars of Australia's march to the final of the U/17 World Cup in New Zealand last year.

McDonald impressed many scouts and eventually had a hush-hush trial at English Premier League team Southampton last December.

Southampton boss Dave Jones was suitably impressed and quickly moved to snap up the youngster on a three year deal from the Victoria Institute of Sport.

MCMASTER SAGA TAKES NEW TWIST

The Jamie McMaster story continues with the Scottish FA to ask FIFA to investigate whether England acted within the rules in giving an U/16 cap to Jamie McMaster, Leeds United's Australian-born midfielder who comes from Scottish stock.

Scotland, and particularly their coach Craig Brown, feel that the English FA have broken an agreement signed by the four home nation associations in 1993 regarding Commonwealth footballers who qualify for British passports.

Under the agreement, such players can represent only the country to which they have the strongest bloodline. The SFA have a copy of the birth certificate of McMaster's father, who was born in Glasgow. McMaster's bloodline is to Scotland.

"We will raise the issue at the next meeting of the International Board on February 19," said a Scottish FA spokesman yesterday. "We want to know whether the FA made a mistake or whether they acted deliberately and that the 1993 agreement has gone by the board."

"At the agreement in 1993, the four home associations agreed that a player must have some kind of bloodline to play for one of the countries even though, under FIFA rules, anyone with a British passport can choose between the four nations."

Although upset at losing McMaster, who was invited to join a Scotland Under-16 party, the SFA clearly see the case as having wider ramifications.

Lancaster Gate, though, stress that they have played McMaster's selection by the FIFA book. "We cleared everything up before McMaster played for us," said an FA spokesman. "we went through everything with a fine tooth-comb."

"We have written confirmation from FIFA that McMaster is eligible to play for England. He wanted to play for England."

Soccer Australia were incensed when McMaster came on and scored for England's Under-16s in a UEFA international in Cyprus.

McMaster now has seven England caps, having played in a competitive fixture, he cannot now choose another country under FIFA rules.

GREG BLAKE COMMENTS: New NSL criteria needs clarity and wider consultation

Although the sweeping changes to the NSL competition have been abruptly swept from the headlines, the culling of four clubs from the major domestic competition and the formation of a ten-team second division for the 2000/2001 season is still a major discussion point and certain argument starter in footy circles.

And as the dramatic revamp appears to be slipping dangerously away from public scrutiny the chances of getting critical questions answered by those in power becomes increasingly more remote.

We haven't heard a squeak from the authorities since the decisions were taken, yet I'm still far from clear on several issues and I think we deserve some straight answers, on some bloody critical issues, as well.

For example:

- Which clubs will get the flick from the major league - and on what basis - if (or, more accurately, when) it is established that more or less than the magical number of twelve clubs fit the criteria?

- If this is to be the ultimate national league, the best of the best, Crème de la crème, the definitive NSL based on adherence to strict criteria, the elite, why is it that we'll compromise its integrity and status within 12 months by introducing automatic promotion and relegation?

- If SA is working to a plan that should, at least in part, address proportional representation from the capital cities and embrace a regional presence, how does that co-exist alongside automatic promotion and relegation, particularly if the second division is restricted only to clubs from metropolitan Sydney and Melbourne?

- Is there a definitive working plan at all for promotion and relegation, or are we winging it as happened back in 1979, when the ill-conceived automatic promotion and relegation of the time became a mockery when the team which finished dead-last, South Melbourne, was deemed too valuable to lose to the NSL and we dumped on Sydney Olympic instead?

- Are there 'protected' clubs, or is it possible that we could lose a Perth Glory to a Blacktown City, or the entire Adelaide market to an Altona Magic?

- On the basis that the bargain-basement figures touted to run a particularly modest second division, how will clubs in that competition, with a suggested annual wage bill of around $300,000, address the (absolute) minimum shortfall of around $1.2 million required for annual wages to merely become competitive on today's NSL standards, should that club win promotion?

- And finally, where will SA find the folding stuff to finance the legal defences against the inevitable avalanche of law suits to come if the above-mentioned issues - and several others to boot - aren't addressed quite thoroughly before ambitiously pressing ahead with such radical changes?

And there are probably a dozen more where they came from.

Most everyone I know with a background in the local game can usually recall all too readily the gory details of one or more half-arsed, hare-brained schemes embraced by the powerbrokers of the day which have come back to haunt the game, either by direct hit or through the ripple effect.

Whether we require the changes to the NSL or not is purely subjective, but taken that it's a given that we do now press ahead let's do it sensibly, publicly - hopefully initiating input and expertise from all areas of the game - and with a fair old slab of foresight, a characteristic not immediately associated with some of the previous custodians of the game in this country.

I would argue that every contentious issue mentioned above should have been debated and addressed long before the NSL clubs, the SA stakeholders and the board voted on reconfiguring the NSL last month, and that the perceived problems can be easily resolved.

As the time window on instituting such sweeping plans closes rapidly, I certainly hope so.

But at this stage all we've heard are (more) grand plans, and for a cynical bastard like me that's not nearly enough any more.

We might be only the mugs who follow and support our clubs, week-in, week-out, or the folks who open and close the canteens, or the codgers who mark the lines, or devotees who assiduously keep stats, or drunks who prop up the social club bar, or has-beens who still worship at their personal field of dreams.

But it is still our game.

Given that 'Inside Soccer' is now acknowledged by the market place as the most widely-read dedicated domestic soccer rag going around, it is not being ego-centric to suggest that you can bet all your Monopoly money that at least one of the game's decision makers has had a read of this issue, and this particular story.

It took me two-hours to write this, thus it shouldn't be too much time out of someone's day to offer a reply on behalf of the governing body.

Perhaps specifically addressing the possibly problematical issues, point by point, as specified above.

And I'll have that without the platitudes, thanks.

So there's the gauntlet being tossed in the dust.

Let's have a little something concrete, maybe even in time for our next edition, to allay a few fears and show that Soccer Australia believes in the public's right to know.

By the way, the postal address is PO BOX 3889, Parramatta, NSW, 2124 and we're on Email at editor@insidesoccer.com.au.

Gee, the season hit the half-way mark at the weekend and we still haven't officially heard squat about the long-awaited pow-wow between the refs, Soccer Australia, the clubs, coaches and players.

Still, at least we appear to be over the embarrassing nine and ten red card weekends of early season, and with public indignation only minimal we shall endeavour to keep it that way. Just a brief update on the 'Hanging Judge' count, with Matthew Breeze getting a double at Gippsland in round 16 (see S-news for 'squirrel grip' story) to give him double figures for the season and outright leadership with ten red cards.

Mind you, after watching vision of the running stoush between the Falcons and Brisbane it was one of the rare occasions when you reckon that a couple of blokes actually got off pretty lightly. Claudio Canosa would have loved it.

Perhaps the SA publicity machine is stalling too often or, more likely, our game is still blatantly ignored (no shocks there) by the mainstreamers.

Either way, it always sucks in a big way.

Presumably a regular feature of the sports pages of the weekend 'Australian' is 'Weekend Watch', a rundown of what's happening where around the nation.

Maybe I just happened on to a dud edition, but last weekend cycling got a gig, as did canoeing, and yachting, and even softball, for gosh sakes - softball!

Bet they had to turn on the water cannons at the turnstiles to hold back the crowds at that one.

However, no mention of the final round of the Four Nations Tournament that weekend, nor the full round of NSL.

This is not unusual, in fact if you've worked in soccer for more than 12 months it's like bloody 'Groundhog Day'.

This time we'll qualify for Confed Cup vows Scarsella

By New Zealand's Weekly Soccer Observer

Following an Oceania FC Executive meeting two weekends ago, Soccer Australia have announced the following plans for this year's FIFA tournaments:

Soccer Australia will use its overseas stars in the Confederations Cup qualifiers in a bid to pick up a $3 million winners' cheque.

The qualifiers will be played in Papeete, Tahiti during June 6-14 after the end of the European season, comments THE AUSTRALIAN allowing such stars as Paul Okon, Mark Bosnich, Harry Kewell, Mark Viduka and Tony Vidmar to be available to play against Tahiti, Fiji, the Solomon Islands and New Zealand for the right to be represent Oceania in the finals.

The teams to join Australia and New Zealand will be dependent upon who finishes first and second from each of the Polynesian Cup (Tahiti April 8-15) and Melanesian Cup (Fiji April 8-15) competitions.

FIFA is yet to determine a venue or date for the finals, which will be staged next year. There is talk of Australia as a likely host.

The champion nation from each of the seven FIFA confederations plus the hosts automatically earn $1m per game at the finals. The finalists each play three group matches with the top two from each group qualifying for the semi-final, the winners of which play in the final.

Soccer Australia chairman Basil Scarsella promised that "the same mistake won't be made twice" - a reference to the body blow the Socceroos received when they were bundled out by New Zealand in the final of the Oceania Nations Cup in Brisbane during October 1998.

A team of locally-based Australians cruised into the final with a series of huge wins, including a 16-0 demolition of the Cook Islands, but they were beaten 1-0 by the Kiwis, who earned $3m when they played in the cup finals in Mexico last year.

The loss, described as a disgrace and a catastrophe, was a crippling blow for SocAus as it struggled financially, at one stage being on the verge of bankruptcy.

"We learned a very hard lesson in Brisbane... one we will never forget," Scarsella said yesterday.

"The money would have gone a long way to solving our problems but, instead, we were left to rue a terrible mistake that nearly sent us under. This time we will use all our best players - no question about that."

National coach Frank Farina was delighted to hear the qualifiers would be held between June 20 and 28.

"Some people might say it will be overkill to use the Kewells, Vidukas and Okons against Tahiti, Cook Islands, et cetera, but these days you just cannot afford to take things for granted," Farina said. "The timing of the qualifiers is perfect and I'll use the best I can."

"I was in Brisbane when we lost to New Zealand and it wasn't a pleasant experience."

Apart from the Socceroos, who will compete in a tournament in Chile next month, the Confederations Cup campaign and several friendlies at home and overseas, SA will fund an Olyroo camp in Europe and a four-nation tournament in Australia during June as well as the Joeys'

The Joeys and Young Socceroos, who play their qualifiers in January next year, will be aiming to qualify for World Cup finals in Trinidad and Tobago (April 2001) and Argentina (2001) respectively.

Also a new Oceania U15 Tournament is to be introduced in 2001.

Australia Day NSL round 18 preview

A superb low strike from Parra's Mile Stérjovski started the rot for Falcons on Saturday night. The return game is in Gippsland tomorrow night.

Newcastle will be happy with a draw to keep up an amazing unbeaten sequence.

Another regional side doing itself proud is Wollongong Wolves. They could actually be league-leaders on Wednesday night if results go their way.

The side - currently sitting in second spot on point behind Olympic and with an extra goal scored - is a credit to the adventurous coaching of Nick Theodorakopoulos.

The players are also receiving their due recognition (wingback Scott Chipperfield should also be named in the Socceros this week.)

The club really does deserve more fans to Brandon Park though. The weekend figure of over 5,000 was encouraging, but how many were Sydney United supporters?

We've said it before and we'll say it again. If Northern Spirit played like Wolves, they would be averaging 18,000 at North Sydney.

Wolves go to Sydney United's Edensor Park full of confidence. Last time United played at home the league-leaders were toppled. Will the second-placed side be beaten as well?

As new United captain Eddie Bosnar said to IS this week, "the side is basically a good side but we just are not having too much luck in front of goals."

When their luck changes, look out, but Wolves are the form team of the two right now.

Parramatta Power looked like they too had been to Brazil for a holiday. Looking tanned and refreshed they ran over the top of a plucky Gippsland Falcons outfit last Saturday at Parramatta Stadium.

Travelling to Gippsland is never easy for the visitors, but in this form Power looks irresistible leading into tomorrow night's return clash at Mobil Park.

The addition of Laybutt will strengthen a defence that has just been boosted by the return of captain Richard Plesa, although Laybutt may not make his debut until the Saturday night blockbuster against Spirit at Parra Stadium.

Falcons too will see the return of a tough central defender in the form of Manny Gotis. He was red-carded against Strikers recently (see S-news for the 'squirrel grip' story).

John Hutchinson - that tigerish little midfielder from Falcons - is due for a big game to celebrate his 50 NSL games, racked up last weekend in Sydney.

Gippsland rarely is easy at home but Power's form is ominous.

Justice arrives via a strange path sometimes. Having been denied a clear penalty in the opening minutes, Carlton were awarded a spot kick in the shadows of full time to clinch all three points against a determined but ultimately directionless Northern Spirit last Friday night.

Sandwiched between those two notable moments were some of the most baffling refereeing decisions seen this season, effectively reducing the match to a lottery.

The referees are often labelled inconsistent, but this writer must go on the record as saying they have been consistently bad, and it has reached the stage where coaches are actually warning their players pre-match about certain officials.

Referee Matthew Breeze, never afraid to brandish a red card, sent Troy Cranney for an early shower after seventy-one minutes when he inexplicably kicked out at Andrew Packer after a 50/50 challenge had seen the ball squirt free for the Carlton player to burst clear down the left flank.

It was certainly out-of-character for Cranney, but his expulsion allowed Carlton to turn up the heat and the final twenty minutes saw Northern Spirit pinned in their own penalty box for long periods, defending not only against a rampant Carlton but a strong breeze as well.

In the end, the pressure proved too much and Matthew Langdon, who had enjoyed a busy game, mistimed a tackle on David Terminello and captain Andrew Marth dispatched the penalty safely away, high to Paul Henderson's left.

To be fair, Carlton deserved to win the game. Blues' keeper Dean Anastasiadis was rarely in the play, while at the other end Henderson (recalled following the suspension of John Perosh) was amongst his team's best players, constantly having to deal with the stream of crosses into the eighteen yard box.

In front of their smallest home crowd of the season, Carlton found it hard to get into top gear in the almost wintry conditions although much credit for that should be attributed to the visitors who repeatedly harassed the Blues into unforced errors.

It was an important victory for Carlton, who were still without experienced Kiwi pair Sean Douglas and Mark Atkinson through international duty, while Stuart Slater's enforced absence through injury prompted yet another midfield shuffle with Thompson dropping back to allow Markovski to partner Moreira up front.

Although the partnership failed to reap a dividend against Northern Spirit, it is worth considering the fact that Carlton have three wins from three matches when Thompson, Markovski and Moreira are all in the starting line-up.

The home team started the better and should have had a penalty in the fifth minute.

Alex Moreira was bowled over by Luke Casserley when he latched on to a superb Marth pass but Matthew Breeze waved play on to give the Spirit their first lucky escape of the evening.

As the first half progressed the visitors got more involved in their opponent's half and Cranney should have scored with a close range header after getting on the end of a deep Langdon cross.

Moments later, some hesitancy between Dean Anastasiadis and Colin Azzopardi almost gifted a goal to David Seal, but his goal-bound header was cleared by Deans before Perinich had a chance to complete the formalities.

Both teams were happy to shoot from long range but shots on target were rare, with most of the interest centering on the midfield battles involving Marth, Lapsansky, Slater and Cranney. All quality players, and all quality passers of the ball, but too often the gap between the midfielders and strikers conspired with the conditions to send passes astray.

The second half was a more entertaining affair, and Archie Thompson signalled his intentions early, exchanging passes with Packer and cutting inside Robbie Slater but his low shot was comfortably saved at the near post by Henderson.

Thompson was the centre of attention again shortly after, when he was booked for diving after being hacked down by Matthew Bingley. As Graham Arnold admitted later, "I actually thought that was a yellow card for Bingley, you could hear him kicking Thompson from where I was!" It would have made things interesting later in the game when Bingley was booked for a foul on Lapsansky.

By that stage Spirit were already down to ten men, with Troy Cranney's dismissal complicating their problems in midfield following Robbie Slater's withdrawal just after the hour.

With the wind at their backs most Carlton players were happy to shoot on sight, although most efforts finished in or around the beer tent. In true 'Big John' style, Markovski managed to belt one free kick out of the stadium, with the ball last seen bouncing across Swan St.

But the busiest player on the park in the final twenty minutes was Paul Henderson. His aerial work was generally excellent, and he denied Moreira seven minutes from time with a spectacular reflex save after the Brazilian connected with a sweet volley barely ten metres from goal.

David McPherson came up from the back to fire a header just wide of an upright, while Moreira managed to get the ball in the net but was correctly ruled have pushed Casserly.

It wasn't the greatest Carlton performance, but with just two points from their previous three starts, the club was in danger of losing touch with the leaders. In that context, the three points earned here were worth much more.

In what is slowly becoming customary this season, the bulk of the post-match press conference centered around the standard of officiating, but to report what was said would, sadly, most likely be viewed as inviting charges of bringing the game into disrepute.

Suffice to say that most people within the game are becoming fed up with the frequency of blatantly wrong decisions having a major effect on the outcome of matches.

Spirit coach Graham Arnold was not complaining about the decisive late-minute penalty on this occasion, however.

"I thought it was a penalty, I'm not arguing about that. Langdon was caught on the wrong side of the player. I thought we battled well, I thought we did quite well in the first half. The sending off killed the game, really. Once that happened, and against the wind, it's just a matter of survival.

"It's disappointing. Carlton are a good side and we hoped to get a point down here and then take them to our place on Wednesday."

Based on this showing however, the best Spirit can hope for now is to prevent the Blues from sweeping the series.

Man of the match performance from Lubo Lapsansky

Munro was obviously pleased to take all three points on offer but was reluctant to get carried away with the performance.

"I thought our second half performance alone allowed us to win the game. We started the game reasonably well but then we sat back and allowed Spirit to dictate terms for twenty minutes, even longer.

"We seemed to get renewed confidence in the second half and their goalkeeper produced several fantastic saves. It was pleasing to win, albeit at the very end with a penalty kick."

As things threaten to get even tighter at the top of the table, it will be even more pleasing if the Blues can win their next home fixture on Saturday night - against leaders Sydney Olympic.

Catlin replied "It's a night I'll remember for the rest of my life. It was perfect."

"Everything went my way tonight. I was a bit worried before the game with all the hype this week and maybe it might be me that lets the team down - it wasn't to be. It was to be my night and the team's night and I'm very happy with the outcome."

Adelaide's best Angelo Costanzo.

By Michael Kmet

The Newcastle Breakers helped Bobby Catlin celebrate his 300th National League appearance with an emphatic 1-0 win against the star-studded Adelaide Force last Friday night.

A crowd of 7674, the second biggest in the club's history for the third time this year, witnessed a different type of Breakers' victory - one in which Newcastle were patient in their build-up against a very solid Adelaide defence, and one in which the Breakers had the greater share of possession, particularly in the midfield.

Before the match Catlin was presented a plaque for his milestone by his ex-keeper coach at Marconi Nick Sokoloff. Big Bob now equals Jeff Olver's total of 300 games as being the only two goalkeepers in NSL history to reach this mark.

Catlin's night was complete in keeping a clean sheet and played a hand late in the game by saving superbly a long-range free kick by Damien Mori. When asked about the result and his milestone

Catlin contributed to a match where both sides were dominant in defence and real opportunities were scarce throughout the match.

The Breakers' brick wall shut out the dangerous Mori and Italian import Claudio Pelosi. Todd McManus was particularly impressive in his man-marking job on Mori and has been going through this season as the quiet achiever of the Breakers' squad.

At the other end of the park the strong Angelo Costanzo was outstanding in muscling Andy Harper out of the game while the rest of the defence smothered any damage livewire Johnny Buonavoglia could cause.

The first half was one of little opportunities as both teams struggled to get the ball out of midfield and penetrate each other's defences.

Adelaide played with a constant zonal back three and this nullified Newcastle from catching them on the break.

It wasn't until the 36th minute when a real goal scoring opportunity arose. Breakers' skipper Shane Pryce sent a precise curling cross from the right but Andy Harper's header shaved the outside of the left hand post.

Five minutes later the Force were certain to score when Mori squeezed between McManus and Glenn Moore and rounded Bobby Catlin to set up an open goal. As Mori was about to side foot the ball home Andy Roberts sprung from nowhere to poke the ball away from Mori's feet leaving both teams scoreless at half time.

The Breakers attacked early in the second half and should have hit the lead.

Buonavoglia worked down the right beating two Adelaide defenders. He sent a pinpoint pass to Andy Harper who mis-kicked his shot. Fortunately the ball fell to Mark Wilson on the penalty spot but he blasted the great chance over the bar.

Adelaide's defence were dealt a huge blow several minutes later when captain Alex Tobin hobbled off injured and was replaced by Bradley Hassell.

In the 55th minute a goalmouth scramble from an Adelaide corner fell to Mori's feet, however Catlin was on hand to smother the shot.

The defining moment of the match came in the 76th minute when left midfielder Brad Wieczorek scored the winner from just inside the eighteen-yard box.

Mark Wilson crossed low and hard from the right. The cross was amazingly missed by two Adelaide defenders and Wieczorek was on hand to drive the ball low and hard with his reliable left foot.

One minute later Hassell nearly equalised for the Force when the buoyant and confident Catlin saved his far post header.

In the 83rd minute Mark Wilson nearly engineered a goal from nothing when he brilliantly turned Atila Hornjik and Dong Ki Kim on the left. His left foot strike was goal bound when it was cleared by Carl Veart.

Nothing was going to stop Bob Catlin from enjoying his night when three minutes into injury time a thirty metre Mori free kick weaved through a maze of players to leave Catlin unsighted. However, Catlin still brilliantly saved to his left to give the Breakers three on the trot in the new millennium.

Breakers' coach Lee Sterrey has run out of superlatives for his team's amazing run in the competition. "It was a good performance tonight because we stayed positive in what we tried to do."

"You have to stay patient against Adelaide - they are a very hard side to beat. We had to string some passes together to be patient. We did a good job that way. We didn't force it too quickly and we pinched the goal that counted at the end of the day."

Bobby Catlin ... 300 game veteran.

A more than usual sombre Zoran Matic put his team's loss down to "I lost my voice at the end of that game. The Breakers deserved that win. They were determined; they defended well and were dangerous on the breaks. We made some bad mistakes during the game, but we're only human."

Matic was downbeat on his team's ever increasing difficult task of making the playoffs. "We'll take one game at a time. We got no points to be able to discuss semi finals."

The Newcastle Breakers are now unbeaten in nine games with seven wins and two draws, but their playoff aspirations will be tested in the next two weeks in what Sterrey describes as the "road trip from hell."

Breakers' coach Lee Sterrey: "You have to be patient against a side like Adelaide Force."

Newcastle play Adelaide away on Australia Day, South Melbourne on Sunday at Bob Jane Stadium, then host South Melbourne the following Wednesday, and back up with an away trip to Wollongong the next Sunday.

backs-to-the-wall effort and they never fired as well this time around, against a side they will meet four times in all this season.

The industrious John Hutchinson was forced to hook the ball clear in only the second minute to save his Falcons' side's blushes after a fluffed clearance by Mehmed Durakovic which saw Jacob Burns and Mile Sterjovski combine to lay on a pass for Joel Griffiths which the blond striker could not quite get to.

In fact, Griffiths was out of luck all night, arriving fractionally too late on numerous occasions or finding the ball played just in behind him, but it was a rare poor game from him and the rest of the team was really on fire this time.

Burns fed Steve Berry in the 4th and it needed a reflex save with his feet by keeper Bojo Jevdjovic to deny another opening.

Gippsland continued to face a barrage of shots from Power players, a defender scrambling clear in the 7th from a Berry shot after good work by David Barrett.

Power took the lead in the 10th minute.

Sterjovski, who had his best game so far for his latest club, turned on a sixpence on the right hand, front edge of the box and slammed the ball low past Jevdjovic, finding the bottom left corner of the net.

A free kick, out on the right touchline, drifted in by Burns was met with a perfect glancing header by defender Joe Vrkic in the 21st to extend Parramatta's lead and within another minute Burns almost made it three when latching onto a Sterjovski pass, but his touch let him down right in front of the goal.

Gippsland's first real chance came in the 33rd when Clayton Bell hit a screamer which just cleared the bar after a poor clearance by Power had handed over possession to the visitors, briefly and they worked their way into a good scoring position.

Parramatta could again have extended their lead in the 40th after excellent work by Sterjovski, who had been been released by Walter Ardone, but Griffiths was supplied with a pass across the face of goal when a shot from the Olyroo might have been a better option and the ball went harmlessly out to safety.

Gippsland looked likely to pull one back right on half time.

Peter Kakos got to a ball first which had been pumped towards goal by a team mate from deep and after Plesa had missed the clearance Kakos lunged at the ball before stand-in keeper Mike Gibson could reach it and it needed a headed, goal-line clearance from Mark Byrnes to keep the score at 2-0 at the break.

Gippsland came out firing in the second half and forced a series of corners and free kicks, but Gibson excelled, after coming into the side for the first time this season, without any competitive matches under his belt. His handling was confident and he made a few important stops as well.

Bell, Andy Vargas and Hutchinson all had shots either saved or blocked by defenders in the opening ten minutes of the second half.

Then Parramatta got going again and went to a 3-0 lead in the 57th minute.

Sterjovski again got away down the right and dragged the ball back from the byline. It eluded Griffiths but fell nicely for Ardone who drove it low into the centre of the net from 12 yards.

Gippsland substitute Robbie Puca injected some life into the attack and had one shot headed off the line by Griffiths in the 69th and a shot by Kakos took a wicked deflection, sending Gibson the wrong way, only for the ball to cannon off the right post and then away to safety moments before.

From a Durakovic cross in the 84th another substitute, Sandy Robertson, managed to head against the same post.

Then, in the 85th, some great work by Parramatta substitute Lachlan Campbell saw his cross from the right roll all the way along the bar and when Jon Angelucci cut the ball back to the edge of the box Burns hit his shot low past the keeper to make it 4-0.

Campbell also shot just over in stoppage time and at the finish it was a very satisfying win for the home side.

Perhaps after this convincing display there will now be a bumper crowd on hand on Saturday next for the first ever derby against Northern Spirit at the same stadium.

David Mitchell said that his team had used the lay off to advantage playing a good trial game against Super League Blacktown City and working especially hard on the defence. It paid off here.

Plesa was troubled by a hamstring strain, still, but got through the game well enough, he added.

The break gave his side time to reflect on what was needed to improve performances and he hoped the crowds would now support his team after this performance. It was a good, entertaining match with both teams playing their part, with an attacking approach from the teams.

Jeff Hopkins, Mitchell's opposite number, felt that he had erred in taking things too easily and blamed himself for the loss. Some of his players have been injured and he expects a much better effort in the return on Wednesday.

Parramatta Power, on this form, would match it with anyone in the top half dozen and loom as contenders at last, given that they have games in hand, albeit tough ones away from home.

Olyroo Jacob Burns: back in form for Power.

By Paul Goodwin

Right from the start of Saturday night's game at Parramatta Stadium it was clear that the Power side, rested for three weeks due to international commitments, were in the right mood.

Their opponents, the Gippsland Falcons, managed a creditable draw on their last visit, but even that night it was a played over 600 NSL games (629 to be precise), to inflict such a defeat on the current champions indicates the quality of their performance.

In their first match back in the NSL after the World Club Championships adventure, shell-shocked South simply had no answer to Olympic's firepower.

The Lakeside outfit looked a shadow of the side that earned international respect in Brazil recently, but it would be unjust to detract from a dazzling performance by the hosts.

Olympic was far too slick and ruthless for the Oceania champions - they were unlucky not to win by an even greater margin.

South Melbourne started the match without Fausto DeAmicis or Dave Clarkson and clearly missed the steadying influence of these two veterans.

Olympic lacked Marcus Phillips and Peter Tsekis, although the return of Scott Thomas proved a real boost in the middle of the park.

The nuggety Novocastrian had the home team in front inside the opening ten minutes.

Gabriel Mendez curled the first corner of the match in to Lyndsay Wilson, who laid the ball back to the edge of the 18 yard box.

Thomas met it sweetly, giving Chris Jones no chance and bringing globetrotting South firmly back to earth.

Brett Emerton continued the good form he has lately been showing for the Olyroos, giving right-back Con Blatsis a torrid time on the flank.

The winger powered through the defence in the 12th minute and rounded the 'keeper, but Blatsis sprinted back to effect a desperate clearance under pressure from Cardozo.

South showed some sporadic flashes of promising play, mostly engineered by Paul Trimboli.

The slightly-built Socceroo set up Michael Curcija for a shot or two early on, and then sent an angled drive just over the Olympic bar from a Goran Lozanovski corner.

On the half-hour mark, Trimboli's outswinging cross completely deceived Olympic 'keeper George Bouhoutsos.

The ball reached Curcija, who aimed a snap shot at the open goal, but Chris Zoricich somehow managed to head to safety.

An awkwardly-bouncing long ball from Mendez in the 34th minute caused havoc in the South penalty box, and drew a fabulous one-handed save from Jones.

Mendez was having probably his finest game yet for the Olympic club and, moments before the half-time break, he doubled the lead with a superb individual goal.

He received the ball about 25 yards out and dribbled casually around a trio of South Melbourne defenders before slotting home under Jones in the coolest possible fashion.

A great game from the impressive Lindsay Wilson

The little maestro: Gabriel Mendez

By Ben Cubby

L league leaders Sydney Olympic inflicted a crushing 6 - 0 defeat upon visitors South Melbourne at Belmore Sportsground on Sunday evening.

Sydney Olympic's 6-0 win over was in fact their single biggest win in the league. Olympic's previous record winning margin was 5 goals, (5-0 four times, 6-1 once).

Considering that Olympic have Any faint hopes of a South Melbourne revival evaporated during a ten minute spell early in the second half.

Tenacious play by Wilson and Peter Zorbas put Arambasic in the clear after 53 minutes and the former-Mechelen striker beat Jones with a well-placed shot.

Straight from the re-start, Olympic continued to torment the lethargic South Melbourne backline.

Another weaving run by Mendez saw him cut down inside the box, but referee Simon Micallef rightly played the advantage and Wilson crashed a shot off the crossbar.

Seconds later, Arambasic got a boot to one of Emerton's low crosses, but this time the overworked Jones was able to scramble the ball to safety.

The Olyroo captain then fed Cardozo with a through-ball and his chipped shot floated inches wide of the far post.

The irrepressible Mendez drew a clear hand-ball from Vaughan Coveny inside the South Melbourne box after 59 minutes, and Cardozo converted the spot kick with aplomb.

At four-nil, Olympic could have been excused for easing off a little. Instead, they stepped up a gear.

Wilson nearly grabbed a well-deserved goal in the 62nd minute, but Jones did well to block his downward-angled header.

Coveny and Curcija kept Bouhoutsos awake with a couple of rare forward sorties, although neither really looked like going in.

If this were a boxing match, it would have been stopped by now. The home fans loved it, though, and there was more to come.

In the 73rd minute, Emerton crowned an outstanding match with a classy goal.

After another surging run down the right, he paused and unexpectedly chipped the ball high over Jones and into the top corner of the net from 20 yards out.

South's coach Ange Postecoglou made a triple substitution after the 5th goal, but it had little effect upon the pattern of the game.

Norm Tome came on for the home side and helped to maintain the relentless forward momentum. His raking drive was well held by Jones in the 78th minute.

Wilson and Cardozo combined to drill the final nail into South Melbourne's coffin four minutes from time.

The gritty defender won a crunching tackle and immediately released Cardozo with a measured through-ball.

The striker held off Nick Orlie long enough to rifle home a shot at the near post.

Thanks mainly to the artistry of man-of-the-match Mendez, South Melbourne just couldn't get hold of the ball in the closing stages.

The little playmaker jinked his way to the byline in the 90th and his hooked shot was tipped just over the bar by Jones.

Sydney Olympic have staked their claim as genuine championship contenders with this victory.

They have added a merciless streak to their attacking verve, and few teams will relish a visit to Belmore for the remainder of the season.

Although much can be blamed on the after-effects of the World Club Championships, South Melbourne were made to look very ordinary in this encounter.

At least they have a chance to seek revenge when these two meet again at Lakeside tomorrow evening.

The Knights really should have won their lower table encounter against Canberra Cosmos on Sunday, particularly with Ivan Kelic and Adrian Cervinski both regaining some good touch up forward for their coach Vlado Vanis.

Cervinski, having last week played a full match in an attacking midfield role, looked much more comfortable as a foil for the big man Kelic. Yet he must have wondered what more he needed to do to score an elusive winner at home, particularly as the Cosmos defence lost concentration during the latter stages of the second half.

Canberra thoroughly looked the part of a struggling table-propping side, and only managed to remain in the contest through a head-turning strike by Gabriel Gonzalez, plus some desperate saves in goals by Angelo Konstantinou.

Admittedly, they were without the services of Danny Burt, whose brace against Marconi the previous week might have otherwise signalled a more attacking attitude by Canberra.

Burt's seventh yellow card of the season prior to this game meant that he won't return for his side until the Round 19 clash at home against the Gippsland Falcons.

Gabby Gonzales: the recently-married Cosmos player scored for the visitors.

There were few other stellar players for both sides, with the exception of Rody Vargas who swept well for the Knights, not to mention his counterpart in Robbie Hooker who put in a fairly solid game for the Cosmos at the opposite end of the park.

But it was Cervinski who in the end should have had the final say on the outcome.

He came desperately close to scoring the deadlock-breaker in the last thirty minutes of play. His late chances ranged from collecting a fortuitous long ball and then firing into the corner of the goal, through to bending a delightful free kick around a five-man wall only for Angelo Konstantinou to acrobatically parry the shot away.

Yet the best chance of all presented itself to Cervinski from the penalty spot in the 85th minute, after Alex Kiratzoglou had been unfairly brought down by Konstantinou inside the 18 yard box.

Up stepped Cervinski, and despite a well-planted shot low and to the right, Konstantinou went the correct way and denied the Knights striker yet again.

Ante Kovacevic had earlier presented Cervinski with the first real chance of the match, and he didn't miss that one.

After fourteen minutes of play, wherein Canberra were allowed a chance to stretch their legs, Kovacevic made a characteristic run through the centre of the pitch, and slipped a neat through ball to Cervinski.

The stocky striker was well positioned in between David Winnie and Robbie Hooker at the edge of the box. Cervinski then simply edged forward of these two and fired diagonally at goal, picking out the upper right half of the open net, despite the efforts of the lunging Cosmos 'keeper.

From that moment on, predictions of a comfortable Knights win looked well founded.

At the 35th minute mark, Ransford Banini ran the ball forward down the right flank, and passed the ball inside to man-of-the-match Cervinski.

Cervinski cleverly backheeled to Kelic inside the area, yet Kelic completely squandered the chance by weakly side-footing the ball at goal, allowing Robbie Hooker to cut across the path of the on-target tap and clear away.

Before any of the crowd could catch their breath after that missed opportunity, Gabriel Gonzalez had streaked away with the ball down the left flank, leaving the Knights defence in his wake.

In he darted beyond the edge of the box and chipped with pin-point precision over the head of Martin John.

So exquisite was the shot that it flew into the roof of the net. Tom Semanni's side had got back on level terms, to make the northern scoreboard read Melbourne Knights 1 - Canberra Cosmos 1.

Few other chances came about in the last nine minutes of the half, with both teams content to wind down the clock until the break.

Ivo de Jesus was given his chance to impress from the 46th minute, and he at times looked a danger to the Knights' back three.

Both teams went about their business in a more physical way during the second half, to the effect that an otherwise miserly Wayne Dade issued four yellow cards within eighteen minutes.

The other main event to rile the partisan home crowd during the second half was Cervinski's numerous near-misses, which did little more than give the Knights fans some cause to sigh in bouts of sheer exasperation.

What the outcome of this match does is effectively kill any slender hope either team had of making the finals for season 1999-2000, and for all intensive purposes both must look towards re-building despite the uncertainties surrounding the imminent move to re-structure the National Soccer League.

Canberra Cosmos coach Tom Semanni thought his charges were quite lucky to come away with a point, after the Knights' second half exploits at goal.

On that note, he was particularly critical of his own team's efforts after the break, when the game was still there to be won.

"Really, what we said we were going to do after half time we didn't really do, which was to get the ball forward and outside their defenders", he said.

"Particularly as the game wore on, we were pinned in our own half. In the end I'd say we stole a point".

Vlado Vanis likewise was disappointed, but thought that the outcome had more to do with luck than with a lack of finishing by the Knights.

"I can't say that the players didn't try, for they had an excellent second half", he said.

He also alluded to 'pressure' he believed would mount on him if his team kept failing to claim the results that were there for the taking.

"I'm still going to work hard until the committee makes a different decision (about the senior coaching role)", he said. "I do believe that I am doing a good job, and I still think we can finish the season in the middle of the table", said Vanis.

Knights news ... Perhaps the biggest statement to be made by the Knights coach though was that he expected veteran English great Peter Beardsley to make a guest appearance for the Knights for their Round 24 clash at home against South Melbourne.

That will no doubt be a match for all and sundry to look out for.

Wollongong Wolves striker Saso Petrovski overcame a niggling ankle injury to score his ninth goal of the season and hand his side a well-deserved 1-0 win over Sydney United at Brandon Park.

The 24-year-old scored the match-winner in the seventh minute with a well-timed header from six-yards past goalkeeper Brett Hughes.

But Petrovski admitted after the game he almost didn't make it onto the field against United.

"I received a knock to the ankle at training during the week and it has been quite sore... but I'm happy I played tonight and got the goal," he said.

"I've pulled up a bit sore but it's nothing serious, just one of those knocks you get now and then."

Petrovski's goal was a gem. It started when wing-back Alvin Ceccoli made a good run down the right flank, cut inside two defenders and floated an inch-perfect cross onto the head of Wollongong's leading marksman.

The goal also kept Petrovski, who hadn't scored in his previous two outings, among the leading scorers in the National League.

The home team had the better of the play throughout the game and were rarely threatened but United's attack, led by Wollongong-based Zvonko Usljebrka and former Wolf Mario Jerman.

Wollongong had two more good chances to score in the first half, following Petrovski's early goal.

The first came in the 14th minute when striker Esala Masi hit the post from six yards after a well-timed cross from Petrovski.

The second, an even easier chance, fell to Ceccoli, but he blasted over from six yards after a pin-point angled pass from midfielder Noel Spencer.

United also had a handful of chances in the first half with Mario Jerman the main culprit for not scoring in the 35th minute.

Midfielder Mirko Jurilj did the lead up work and his defence-splitting pass found Jerman in a one-on-one situation with Wollongong goalkeeper Les Pogliacomini.

Jerman attempted to place the ball past Pogliacomini from the edge of the box, but the goalkeeper pulled off a brilliant save.

In fact, Pogliacomini was called upon throughout the game to foil United's long ball game from corners and general play.

He is also keeping Daniel Beltrame, who started the season with the number one shirt, out of the Wollongong team.

United started the second half with the wind behind them and by replacing Ray Younis for Joe Moric.

The move changed things a little for United and when Usljebrka turned defender David Cervinski inside the box and blasted at Pogliacomini, who in turn tipped over the bar, there seemed to be an air of confidence about the visitors. Unfortunately for them, that's where the chances ended.

Both substitute David Huxley and Antony Surjan had good chances to put the issue beyond doubt for Wollongong but the 1-0 result was good enough in the end.

A delighted Nick Theodorakopoulos said after the game his side deserved the three points and that a top two finish was his side's main objective.

"We had the territorial advantage throughout and I made a point during the week that we would look to not conceding a goal against Sydney United tonight," he said.

"I thought David Cervinski and George Souris were standouts at the back while Les Pogliacomini looked comfortable in goal.

"Scott Chipperfield played well despite the fact he had been sick for most of the week while Esala Masi had just returned home following the death of his father last weekend.

"We're playing well but are taking one thing at a time. I also have good quality on the bench, which will come in handy during the second half of the season and we have a few players heading for suspensions with yellow cards.

Winning goal: the highly dangerous Saso Petrovski pensions with yellow cards.

"That win also put us in clear second position... that'll do wonders for the confidence."

A clearly dejected Sydney United coach David Ratcliffe said he expected better from some of his players and put the defeat down to poor crossing and untidiness.

"We had a couple of decent players missing and we do play better at home," he said.

"We were untidy in the first 15 minutes but slowly settled down, but we didn't take our chances."

Ratcliffe, returning to the club where he played and coached for eight years also had this to say about the Wollongong fans: "It seems everyone in the grandstand is an expert!" The game attracted 5842 spectators.

Fijian international Esala Masi had a special incentive to beat Sydney United at Brandon Park.

He slotted straight into the Wollongong team just 24 hours after returning home from Fiji, where he attended his father's funeral mid-week.

It had been a stressful week for the man they call Tigger, but his return was a timely boost for Wollongong.

Masi has scored eight goals this season and was one of Wollongong's best against United.

He never gave the opposition an inch and ran all afternoon. He was outstanding in such difficult circumstances.

"I wasn't 100 percent but I thought I went alright tonight," Masi said. "I knew I had to be strong for me and for the team."

"It's been hard, it's been a hard week, but I wanted to play tonight."

"I always planned on returning home on the weekend so I could play on Sunday... it's something I wanted to do."

Masi, who has become a cult figure in his hometown of Ba in Fiji, also sends regular newspaper articles home for his town to read.

He is also seen regularly on television playing for Wollongong in Fiji.

But he had an unexpected return trip home last Monday morning when his father passed away on Sunday night, just a couple of hours after he scored a goal in his side's 3-2 home win over Carlton.

Wollongong coach Nick Theodorakopoulos said he was always going to start Masi. "Esala was keen to be involved because his dad would have wanted it that way."

which showed no sign of letting up during the game.

As the players walked onto the playing field, they were welcomed by sauna-like conditions that clearly affected the standard of play.

Both sides gave uninspiring, lethargic displays which would have left many of the 3900 supporters wondering why they didn't spend their evenings relaxing beside a swimming pool.

It took 12 minutes of uneventful play before the Strikers first threatened the Marconi goal. Nick Meredith fired in a trademark cross which found the head of leading goalscorer Paul Foster, who could only head the ball over the bar.

Brisbane had a penalty appeal turned down five minutes later when it appeared the ball was handled in the area, but referee Gerry Connolly quite rightly waived the protests, judging the handball to be accidental.

Brisbane soccer legend Frank Farina was in the stands in his role as Soccerroo coach, and Strikers keeper Clint Bolton was keen to show his inclusion in the Australian squad to Chile was justified.

He pulled off a great save twenty minutes into the game to deny Chad Gibson a goal from a free kick outside the area. At full stretch, he was able to tip the shot over the crossbar.

Kris Trajanovski beat Bolton in the 37th minute, but it was former teammate Danny Invincible who set the goal up for the former Soccerroo.

Invincible, who followed Farina to Marconi two seasons ago, sent in an inch-perfect cross from the right sideline. Trajanovski out-jumped Strikers captain Stuart McLaren to head the ball past Bolton.

The score remained unchanged at half time, when Strikers coach John Kosmina replaced Paul Foster, who picked up a foot injury, with utility Mark Battistin.

In a tactical switch, McLaren went up front and Battistin in turn took his place in the defence.

The second half was a tale of missed opportunities for the Strikers.

David Pilic did well evading a number of defenders in the Marconi box, but in the end his weak shot did not trouble Stallions keeper Michael Turnbull.

Peter Dwyer also had a good chance just past the hour mark, but he was unable to get on the end of Peter Grierson's cross.

Grierson himself had three good chances to earn a point, but none of his efforts greatly troubled the Marconi defence.

For their part, Marconi only had one noteworthy attacking raid in the half, but Gibson found Brisbane defender Glenn Gwynne in fine form to deny his cross.

The game gradually fizzled out, as the players became lethargic in the sub-tropical heat.

Kosmina refused to blame the oppressive heat for his team's poor performance.

"We've been living in these conditions for a week, and it's the same for both teams," he said.

"It wasn't the heat that let us down. We did enough in the second half to win the game."

Marconi counterpart Eddie Krncevic said heat would always be a problem in Australia with summer soccer.

"It was very warm out there - you could see a lot of the players were walking," he said.

"I'm not a great fan of summer soccer, but in this country it's the only way we can get the publicity without competing with other codes."

He said gaining three points in such conditions was never going to be an easy task.

"It's never easy coming up to Brisbane and taking something away from them, especially in these difficult conditions," he said.

"Brisbane's a very good team this year, and the way they've gelled together means they're a hard team to break down."

The win has Marconi knocking on the door of the top-six.

"It was an important win for us, especially after the horrible result on Sunday against Canberra," said Krncevic.

"I thought we played well in the first half, and in the second half we defended and the pressure was on, but the boys did the job."

Kosmina said he thought the Strikers could have won the game.

"We got into some good positions and certainly didn't make the most of them," he said.

"We probably could have (won the match) in the end, but the fact is we didn't do enough in the first half. Their goal came from a ball which should not have been allowed to be chipped in, and in the end it was a good header."

The Strikers again play Marconi on Wednesday in Sydney, followed by a home game against the Kingz next Saturday. Kosmina dismissed suggestions this was simply too much for the players to cope with.

"Blokes like to put their hands up and say they're professional footballers," he said.

"If they can't play three games in a week at this stage of the year at this level, then they've got to say they're part-timers and maybe the National League is too hard for them."

Kosmina will have Jade North and Jeromy Harris returning from suspension for Wednesday's game.

"I think we missed Jade (North) tonight, especially in the first half," he said.

"So it will be good to have him back."

For his part, Krncevic will be able to call upon the services of skipper Brad Maloney and striker Sean Babic, which will hopefully provide the Marconi faithful with a better match than witnessed at the old Lang Park.

Home supporters still had something to cheer about after chairman Tony Petty's announcement that the Strikers will remain in Brisbane - for the rest of this season at least.

However, that did not stop the "Banana Army" voicing their opposition to the proposed Carrara move in song throughout the match.

CARLTON REMAIN UNDEFEATED

Ivan Gelemanovic ... started in Knights' win over VIS.
Pic by Roy Hay

Roy Hay reports that Preston Lions scored its first win of the season at home to Albury Wodonga in the Southern Division on Saturday by four goals to one.

Ali Ibrahim scored two goals and Daniel Filev and Simon Petkovski contributed one each. For Albury Darryl Binney scored the goal.

The young Preston team have fought hard to get a result and this will do a lot for the player's confidence.

South Melbourne avenged its recent defeat by South Dandenong in emphatic fashion with a six-nil win at George Andrews Reserve.

There was only one goal in it at half time, a penalty converted by Mustafa Mustafa in 22 minutes.

A second penalty right at the start of the second half by Anthony Magnacca took the wind out of any comeback by South Dandenong and substitute Jovanco Novacevski came on to complete a hat-trick in 56, 85 and 87 minutes.

Tass Psonis scored his first goal for eight weeks to round off the scoring.

In midweek, Carlton beat Fawkner Blues by three goals to nil at Smith Reserve.

Angelo Mtsiopoulous scored twice, taking his tally for the season to eight, and Joshua Kennedy got the other one. Carlton now has a six point lead over the VIS in the Southern Division.

A stunning game at Mahoney's Reserve resulted in a five-three win to Bulleen Inter over Gippsland Falcons.

Falcons started well and took a 26 minute lead through Tony Pardo, which lasted just six minutes before Joe Damiano equalised for Bulleen.

Michael Katz was next to score in 36 minutes for the Falcons and when Ryan Ollerton pulled a goal back in 44 it seemed that the teams would go to the break level.

But no-one had not counted on Falcons other striker Igor Stojanac who got another goal in injury time.

Playing three up front and three at the back, Bulleen contributed to the wide open game and in the second half its adventure paid off as Luigi Gullaci and newcomer Frank Coniglio scored in the 63 and 70 minutes respectively.

The final goal by Xhezair Sulimani in 87 minutes was just the coup de grace.

Berkan Sakaci in midfield and Paul Presti were superb for Bulleen while the Falcons twin strikers Pardo and Stojanac threatened all day.

Melbourne Knights also came from behind twice to beat the Victorian Institute of Sport by three goals to two at Knights Stadium.

The Knights had the early play but failed to score and it was David Terek of the VIS who scored the only goal of the first half in 24 minutes.

It was not till 69 minutes had passed that the Knights got on terms with a free kick

Bye - Sydney United Colts

Chris Conti reports that the Youth game between Sydney United Academy and the ACT Academy of Sport was dominated and decided by one player - the mercurial and elusive Nick Carle.

He demonstrated the danger he was to the ACTAS defence as early as the fourteenth minute when he began a run which finished with a shot which went just wide of the ACTAS goal.

However, both sides had some good opportunities, and in the 35th minute the ACTAS striker, Paul Ivanic, found himself clear, but the Olympic sweeper, Paul Kohler, somehow robbed Ivanic of the ball.

Indeed, as a result of the clearing tackle Ivanic had to leave the field on a stretcher; his replacement, Steven Arnott, immediately made an impact as he played a delightful one-two with Carl Valeri who placed the ball perfectly past the Olympic goalie, Glenn Wheatley for the opening goal.

Straight after the interval, Carle took charge and within eleven minutes Olympic had taken a match winning lead.

Firstly, he squirmed his way past three flat-footed ACTAS defenders, and set up Ben Jarman who smashed the ball past Tony Giannasca.

In the next five minutes, Carle forced Giannasca into two brilliant saves, but in the 56th minute, he received a ball from Hassan Jomaa in the goal area and superbly stabbed it past Giannasca.

For the next ten minutes Jomaa, Carle, Christian Cevenini and Anthony Sarmonikas laid siege to the ACTAS goal, but with a combination of good goalkeeping by Giannasca, and profligate finishing by the Olympic forwards the score remained at 2-1.

ACTAS could easily have pinched a point at the death, when Arnott delightfully found Kemp making ground on the left - Kemp took the ball on his chest, but before he could get in a shot Wheatley and Kohler combined to concede a corner.

Theo Katsaros reports that on Wednesday night the Wollongong Wolves travelled north to Christie Park to record a 2-0 victory over the Northern Spirit Colts.

Sasho Dimoski opened the scoring after just 6 minutes and Paul O'Grady secured the result when he found the back of the net five minutes from time.

In a shock result the Newcastle Breakers Colts thumped Sydney Olympic at Breakers Stadium by five goals to nil. The victory was not surprising but the margin of the victory surely was. Olympic have now lost their past two encounters after being undefeated for the first three months of the competition.

Robert Angievski scored a double for the home team courtesy of a 20th minute penalty and a last minute strike. Singles were registered by Peter Haynes after 40 minutes, Luke Tomich on the stroke of half-time and Andrew Blanning in the 88th minute.

In Wollongong, the Northern Spirit Colts defeated the Wollongong Wolves Colts. John Majurovski netted twice to give his team a 2-0 victory. He struck once in each half to hand the luckless Wolves their 12th defeat of the season.

The Parramatta Power proved too strong against the A.I.S. at Parramatta Stadium. The institute's new scholarship holders will take some time to get as the 3-1 scoreline suggests.

For the Power, Danny Townsend scored in the 36th minute before Daniel Kukucka took his season tally to nine when he netted twice in the second-half. Steven Pace scored a consolation goal for the A.I.S. a minute from time.

The Marconi Stallions suffered their first loss in the past month at Suncorp Metway Stadium despite leading 1-0 at the break. The Q.A.S. scored twice in the space of three minutes to record a fine win.

Anthony Mondello struck for the Stallions after 25 minutes but the home team found their range in the 64th and 67th minutes. Russell Miner captured his 14th goal of the campaign before Lawrence Drake scored what was ultimately the winner.

Miner has increased his lead at the top of the goalscorers charts to three goals. However, with Elias Demourtzidis fulfilling his scholarship at the A.I.S. it seems likely that Miner may have an unassailable lead. Only time will tell.

Goals to Michael Prentice, Mark Rudan and Derryk Kane helped the Northern Spirit defeat the Marconi Stallions Colts. The 3-0 win lifts the Spirit into the top four for the first time since late November.

Prentice scored after 30 minutes to give the Spirit the lead. After the break, Rudan and then Kane netted to seal the result.

Jay Lucas scored a double as the Wollongong Wolves scored a 2-1 win over Sydney United. After beating the league leaders last week the Pumas must have been confident of a repeat performance against the Wolves, especially after taking a 3rd minute lead.

Akwasi Agyei found the net for the visitors but Lucas and his team-mates fought back in the second-half. Lucas struck in the 57th minute and then grabbed the glory when he netted again after 72 minutes.

The short fat kid stands tall in Brazil's Maracana

Jones in action for South in their first game against Vasco da Gama. With him is Robert Liparoti.

By Aidan Ormond

By Chris Jones' own admission, in his junior days in Melbourne with Karingal United he was the "short fat kid with the Michelin legs who was told to play in goals. I couldn't run!" he said.

As luck would have it for Jones' current NSL club South Melbourne, the young keeper actually preferred playing in goals, according to his then-manager Alex Ormond.

"While most kids just loved to play outfield, Chris actually seemed to enjoy being keeper ... it seemed it was the only position he wanted to play," said Ormond.

Later in his career, luck would also play a part. Turning out in a friendly for state league club Oakleigh (where fortuitously he had just been loaned), against South Melbourne, Jones did enough to impress coach Ange Postecoglou, and a spot in Australia's most celebrated squad of the late nineties was his.

And after a couple of seasons playing second fiddle to first Soccerroo Michael Petkovic then this season Hungarian import Milan Udvaracz, Jones got his opportunity when Udvaracz was red-carded for allegedly spitting (an allegation the Hungarian denies.)

Jones did enough again to warrant Postecoglou's faith, and again, as luck would have it, it was just before the World Club Championship, a tournament being held for the first time and during South's reign as Australian champions.

As we know Jones did not disappoint in Brazil and now he is sifting through offers for possible moves next season to European glamour leagues.

Yes, he has worked hard for his success (he works full-time at Avco as well) but fate and luck have been kind to the likeable 24-year-old from Langwarrin (despite unsuccessful trials in the UK; his parents Dick and Barbara are from Liverpool). Certainly the Maracana Stadium is a long way from the vast windy expanses of Karingal United's home ground at Ballam Park in suburban Frankston.

"Well only six weeks ago I was playing youth team, but yes it certainly is a big step from there to Brazil's Maracana, having police escorts everywhere you go and fans coming up to you wishing you well," he said after arriving back to the relative anonymity of Melbourne.

"The first game against Vasco was unbelievable, especially when they played their national anthem in front of 70,000.

"Yeah it's just luck I guess, because it would have been a hard decision for Ange. I have to thank him for having the confidence in me.

"I think we felt we could have done better at the end of our games. Having said that the defensive display - particularly in the first game against Vasco - was just awesome. The amount of times guys like Nick Orlic or 'Lippa' (Rob Liparoti) got their bodies in the way of shots."

Jones may also have been given the seal of approval by the infamous duo of Brazilian soccer - Romario and Edmundo ('The Animal').

"Romario winked at me so I winked back at him. I don't know what it meant though! And Edmundo tapped me on my head after he missed a goal.

"The tournament was very good, particularly with two Brazil teams in it. I hope they have more of these championships.

"The Manchester United game was a very hot day, so if you bust a gut you would have been dead in five minutes, but I still feel they were taking it a little easy.

"Against Necaxa it was unusual to have three penalties against us, and Con Blatsis is as honest as they come, and he said one did not hit him on the arm.

"I lost three kilos in the Vasco game and the players on the field would have lost even more, so I think playing the Necaxa game 48 hrs after Vasco made it so much more difficult for us."

And now the whole tournament is out of the way, Jones is adamant the rest of the season will see South bury the demons of the first half of the league, and forge ahead to the finals.

"Even though we weren't saying it, it was understandable that South may have been preoccupied with thought of playing in Brazil and clubs like the Red Devils of Manchester United," concluded Jones.

Sadly, last Sunday's 6-0 demolition by Olympic of South only serves to show how difficult it will be to get back to the finals this season.

Karingal United were also nicknamed the Red Devils. Was that an omen for the short fat kid in goals all those years ago?

In South news ... Ange Postecoglou signed former Carlton striker Andy Vlahos (below) once it became evident the player was eager to return to Australia with South Melbourne.

"Obviously we're very pleased to add another quality player to our impressive squad," Postecoglou said on South's net site.

"He has enjoyed two good years in Australia and now he's got European experience with Panathinaikos also. We're very happy to have him here."

Postecoglou has conceded it is unlikely that his new signing will play until tomorrow (Wed.) when Sydney Olympic visit South for their first game since the WCC, where he is expected to assume a left-sided midfield role.

"Andy should play in the home game against Olympic. He's a disciplined player with a good attitude and strong playing attributes, and will add depth to our midfield," Postecoglou said.

Australia Day Honours: Farina selects NSL stars for Chile tour

In the next few days Soccerroo coach Frank Farina is tipped to announce his national squad for the February

Chile tour. Expect NSL stars Pablo Cardozo (right) from Sydney Olympic, Wolves' Scott Chipperfield (below), Clint Bolton from the Strikers and Glory's Olyroo Kasey Wehrman to be called up.

Inspirational Olyroo Hayden Foxe is another that will be putting on the green and gold against Chile, Bulgaria and Slovakia.

And there is more good news with Mark Schwarzer

- Middlesbrough's inform keeper - making himself available for this tour

(expect him to be the number one keeper on this trip.)

J-league-experienced defenders Tony Popovic and Power's new signing Steve Laybutt should also be in the squad to be announced probably on Thursday.

The naming of the squad has been delayed due to some European clubs and their tardiness in getting back to Soccer Australia regarding the release of players.

Joe Simunic - who has given a commitment to Farina that he does want to play for Australia - is now doubtful given his transfer to Hertha Berlin. The player may want to stay in Germany as a result.

Other players who are possible inclusions include Stan Lazaridis, Glasgow Rangers duo Moore and Vidmar, Mark Viduka and Sydney Olympic's Brett Emerton.

Stange says Ergic set for world stardom

Glory coach Bernd Stange has paid young midfielder Ivan Ergic the ultimate compliment. He says he can't teach the 18-year-old a thing!

"He's already scored eight goals in 15 games from midfield and he's a sensation. In 25 years of coaching at the highest level in Germany only Ulf Kirsten (Bayer Leverkusen) and Matthias Sammer (ex-Borussia Dortmund) have been this good. I can't teach him anything! He's very, very exciting."

Ironically, Ulf Kirsten is a possible Glory player for next season.

"Believe me, I'm sure he will be gone from here in the next few months," added Stange.

All the agents are here already and soon our stands will be filled with coaches from half of Europe's biggest clubs," said Stange to net site Football 365.

A big wrap indeed, but of some of Future world star? Ivan Ergic of Perth Glory.

"But we had no chance of keeping him because the salaries are very low here and it's a big opportunity for him. But maybe it's come too early."

"But my other keeper Jason Petkovic, is much better than Milosevic. He is 26 though, and Leeds wanted Danny. It's good business for Leeds to get Milosevic for such a small fee. But that's not my department!"

Leeds' signing of Hay also surprised Stange, the former East Germany national coach who is himself the subject of some transfer speculation (see page two). The 24-year-old centre-back cost the Yorkshire outfit £200,000, with a further £100,000 to come Perth's way when he has played 60 first-team games. Or rather, if he does, as he is yet to make his debut.

"I tried to send Hay to Stuttgart but Leeds came in," said Stange.

"I think he needs longer too, he needs to adapt to English football, which is very aggressive."

"He is tall and quick and strong in the air but he needs much more aggression. I'm not sure he'll make it."

Glory has also signed Ljubo Milicevic, a tough defender from the AIS. Will he be as good as Ergic? Will Ergic be called up by Raul Blanco?

After such a wrap, surely the Olympic coach would be thinking about him for the next Olympic tour to be held in March in Europe, against a top nation we are told.

Former Glory keeper Danny Milosevic: "It's good business for Leeds," says Stange.

his departed players, he was less lavish, particularly Olyroo Danny Milosevic and Kiwi Danny Hay.

"Milosevic is a very young man with a big future. He is tall, with good reactions and is a nice character. He will become a good leader too. But he should have waited longer - he'd have been better off being first-choice goalkeeper here than being second or third choice at Leeds."

Shame, Futsal Australia, shame. At a time when we should be teaching our children morals, the importance of fair play and, in sport, to accept the referee's decision, over the weekend (15/1) we saw perhaps one of the worst decisions ever made and a decision that will have ramifications for Indoor Soccer in this country.

At the national futsal indoor titles held at the AIS in Canberra, in a semi-final of the U/10s competition, a Sydney-based team, which was undefeated for the whole tournament won a penalty shootout (yes, the dreaded penalty shootout which is traumatic enough for adults let alone children) fairly and squarely.

However a frivolous protest from the opposition Canberra team was lodged and following a period of two hours the appeals committee conveyed their decision that the penalty shootout was to be retaken.

The decision was despite the match referees setting the rules of the shootout at the time, which were followed by both teams precisely.

It is also worth noting that a parent from the Canberra team physically assaulted the referee following the shootout. A fine example for our impressionable children.

Just when Futsal Australia could step in and make an example of what had happened, their appeals committee favors the Canberra side and, by this, apparently condones the violent behaviour we witnessed. They also, by their decision, sent out the message that the decision of the referee is not necessarily final, despite all other things being equal and fair.

For the record, the parents of the Sydney-based team refused to subject their children to the retaking of the penalty shootout in the circumstances and went home leaving the Canberra team to play the final.

Understandably, the Sydney children were distraught with what had happened but their parents took the sensible decision and considered the well-being of the children of both teams.

Despite all the negativity about the penalty shootout, Futsal Australia chose it as a first resort despite requests for the game to be replayed on a 'Golden Goal' basis, instead of a penalty shootout.

What message can be interpreted from what happened?

- The referee's decision is not final
- If you don't agree with the ref's decision, condone violent behaviour and assault, you may yet win a game.

What a disgrace and with decisions like that no wonder Soccer in this country runs a very sad fourth to other codes - we are losing sight of what sport really means. Shame.

Hi my name is Michael Barber, and being an avid reader of your soccer newspaper, it is good to finally see a paper dealing with the local game, so congratulations on a top effort.

I do have one question however, which is that I have been trying to get the matildas calendar and for the love of God I can't find it anywhere, being in a country town it is hard to get these sort of things, but hopefully with your help I can find out where I can get one.

Keep up the good work with your excellent newspaper and I wish you success in the future.

The Four Diegos

with ace Brissy striker Paul Foster

On Guest of the Week we have a goal-scoring member of the surprise packet of the NSL this season, Brisbane Strikers.

His 11 goals and incisive finishing have been one of the major factors behind the Strikers' success and push for national league glory this season.

Please a big Four Diegos and IS welyour speeding tickets now that you are a star? What benefits have come your way since you started scoring bags of goals?"

Foster: "It's all wine, women and song up here! I now don't train that often - I'm always down the pub. Seriously though, nothing has really changed. As far as the police go, we've got one in our team so I guess I've got an immediate advantage whether I score goals or not."

Brisbane is a great place and a good time is had by all when we go out socially."

Diegos: "People like to label strikers. Descriptions like - buffet-ing target man, nancy-boy goal poacher or lazy, good-for-nothing, use-less slob - are quite commonly used."

How would describe yourself as a striker?"

Foster: "Geez Diegos, that's a tough one. You've really stumped me on that. That's certainly not a question that I've ever considered. People warned me about the Diegos' 'Hard Questions' and now I know exactly what they mean. I guess I just go out there and try to do my best and be as unselfish as possible."

Diegos: "Brisbane

Strikers coach John Kosmina possesses an intimidating reputation. Some say he's so scary that he makes the 'Blair Witch Project' look more like a Humphrey B Bear stroll through the Botanical Gardens."

What's he like as a coach and being a former legendary Socceroo striker, does he like to pull you aside and tell you how it's done?"

Foster: "He does give me pointers and watches closely what I'm doing. 'Kossie' is only an intimidating guy if you're playing against him. He is actually a great bloke and his reputation in my opinion, doesn't do him justice."

He is very intelligent and very 'switched on' as a coach and I think that would surprise a lot of people."

Diegos: "One of your former clubs South Melbourne has recently competed in the World Club Championships in Brazil. Although losing all three games they performed admirably, not losing by more than two goals to any team."

Earlier in the season though, Brisbane shellacked the Lakesiders 5-1 with you notching a hat trick."

If you apply a bit Diego mathematical genius, does this then mean that the Strikers would've won the tournament in Brazil in they participated and that you are in fact, a better player than Romario, Edmundo and Andy Cole, who could not score against South?"

Foster: "I think it was unfortunate for South Melbourne because they haven't really shown a lot of form this season. If they had have taken some of last season's form over to Rio they may have done even better. Having said that they performed really well."

Diegos: "From a NSL player's point of view what effect did South Melbourne's performance have on you and in your opinion, how can the NSL clubs capitalise on the fact that we now know that Australian clubs can compete with any club side in the world?"

Foster: "I think from a player's point of view we've now got something extra to look forward to. If you can manage to win the league you now have an incentive to go and play against some of the best clubs in the world."

That's fantastic from the player's viewpoint. As for capitalising on those types of things, all you can do is try to get as much of this achievement into the mainstream media as possible

Hopefully then Channel 7, which holds the rights to Aussie soccer, might deem it attractive to air our NSL games on commercial TV."

Diegos: "Your brother Craig really came of age as a player under Terry Venables for the Socceroos, earning an overseas deal with Portsmouth and now Crystal Palace at a relatively late stage in his career."

Do you still harbour a desire to play for the Socceroos and do you ever get on the phone to Terry with the view of getting a lucrative deal over in Britain?"

Foster: "I haven't spoken to Terry

Foster battles with Spirit's Mike Cunico earlier this season.

since the evening of the tragic Iran game in 1997. I've just turned 32 years of age and had a look at John Kosmina's record where he played his last game for Australia at 32, so I think it would be a little optimistic of me to hope to make a debut this late in my career."

The form is certainly alright but the age is perhaps counting against me."

Diegos: "Thanks Paul. You can join the Diegos four-pronged attack anytime. Adios amigo!"

Foster: "Thanks for the offer Diegos but I don't think 'Kossie' would be too happy if I crossed over to the Diego's camp. I don't want to relive the Blair Witch Project everyday for the rest of my life if you know what I mean. Adios amigos!"

come to this season's NSL leading goalscorer - Brisbane Strikers' Paul Foster.

Diegos: "Congratulations on your goal-scoring form at present. In recent years we've been used to the likes of Pablo Cardozo or Damian Mori leading the domestic goal-scoring charts but this season it's different, you've come out of nowhere and seem to be scoring goals for fun."

Are you surprised at your rich vein of scoring form?"

Foster: "I always felt that when I came back that I'd score a few. Certainly the run at the beginning of the season when everyone had written us off but we confounded them by being unbeaten for 9 games, was a bit of a surprise. So things from a team point of view have gone better than expected and obviously we're pretty happy about that."

Diegos: "Being part of the Diegos infamous four-pronged attack, we know that being a glamour-boy striker brings with it certain hedonistic and other benefits."

How are you doing at the Gold Coast nightclubs these days? Do police rip up

"It's all wine, women and song up here! I now don't train that often - I'm always down the pub. Seriously though, nothing has really changed."

Kickoff 2000 excels

Junior development in the Newcastle area has taken a huge step forward with the organisation of Excel Soccer's "Kickoff 2000" camp last week. Excel Soccer Inc. is the brainchild of former Newcastle national league coach Jim Foley and local businessman Phil Russell.

Their aim is to improve the level of junior football in Newcastle by creating high intensity programs through the utilisation of high quality coaches, and using the fabulous facilities at the University of Newcastle.

One such program is Kickoff 2000 - a complete camp that has a live-on-campus component for half its athletes. Kickoff 2000 is supported by the University of Newcastle Soccer Club and the University of Newcastle Sports Union, and has secured national/international sponsors such as Pepsi, Admiral, and Impulse Airlines.

Kickoff 2000 has attracted high profile coaches such as former Scottish international and champions medals winner with Celtic Willie Wallace, English FA accredited coach Len McKendry, John Gardiner, John McKie, Eddie Reeve, Ossie Bellamy, and speed and fitness conditioning expert Dennis Pitt.

Camp director Jim Foley has an unbridled belief in what Excel Soccer can do to junior development in the Hunter area.

"Excel Soccer was born from our belief that juniors have to spend more quality time in quality practice", Foley told Inside Soccer.

"Many players are fortunate to have quality training at their club, but there are many that need to have their club training supplemented by what we are doing.

"Hopefully we are able to provide more young players more opportunities to improve their game."

Foley believed that there was a need in Newcastle for such a program, particularly with the quality of player that can be produced in the area.

"Newcastle has long been recognised as a big nursery for the game in Australia. I don't believe we have reached a saturation point for what we are doing for players in Australia.

"We're at a facility in Australia here at the University of Newcastle that is first class. First of all the players come into this tremendous environment backed by having the experience we have with the coaching staff.

"Then we emphasise the total approach to training, why they are here - to learn and improve and reach the goals they have set for themselves. Hopefully this week presents the opportunity to embrace all those things for their further development."

Willie Wallace has nothing but praise for organisation of the camp in its first year.

"The camp was excellent. The facilities, the grounds, the organisation - everything is great. Most of the camps I have been through the University of New England but this is as good, if not better."

Wallace feels that the players, aged between 12 and 16 will benefit greatly from the week.

"It gives the kids encouragement to train harder in the game. Our current system has young players only training a few hours a week - it doesn't happen that way.

"You have to be like swimmers, cricketers, you name it, you have to put more into the game to succeed. Soccer players have to do the same."

From the University of Newcastle Sports Union Chris Tola welcomes Excel Soccer to the university. "I think by having a camp such as this on campus we are profiling the excellent facilities here which I believe is one of the best in Australia. Our ultimate goal with this is to rival and better the University of New England camp."

For more information on how you can be involved with Excel Soccer phone Jim Foley on 0418 423 192.

Arise Sir Frank!

Well almost! Tomorrow new Socceroo coach Frank Farina will be awarded an OAM in the Australia Day honours list. It is for "services to soccer as a player and coach".

He was nominated after the Strikers' Grand Final victory in 1997, but his nomination also noted his significant achievements as a player and the fact that he was really the first of the successful overseas Australian players to come back and put something into the game while he was still young enough (31) to make a decent contribution.

The Award - an OAM - is a recognition by, and a thank you from, the Australian community that he has made a level of contribution "above and beyond" the call of duty, so to speak.

OAM stands for Medal of the Order of Australia. People generally get one for charity work, community work and services to sport. (There's also another category for public servants, fire officers, police officers etc).

Other sports people to have an

OAM include Allan Border, Mark Taylor, Mick Doohan, John Newcombe, Kieren Perkins and former soccer referee and Inside Soccer writer Donald Campbell - to name a few.

Big Bob's 300

By Aidan Ormond

Big Bob Catlin may not have an BOAM (yet!) but he does have a Hill at Breakers Stadium named after him and he has just played game number 300 in the NSL.

He has now equalled Jeff Olver's record. Catlin has played 43 times for his current club Newcastle Breakers and is one of the reasons for Newcastle's surge to the finals this season.

I vividly remember playing against 'Big Bob' back in 1981 in the Australian Schoolboys Championships at Elwood in Victoria.

He was huge back then and of course it was no use trying to intimidate him.

He was a rock behind the NSW side that featured little midfield dynamo Gary Phillips, even though Victoria went on to win the tournament.

Congratulations Bob from IS,

NSL 300-gamer Big Bob Catlin.

here's hoping you reach 350.

Fiji tour for schoolboys

The Australian Schoolboys "A" team was defeated by a full strength Fiji Under/20 team 3-2 in a rugged encounter at Nadi's Prince Charles Park last weekend.

Goals were scored by Matthew Low and Nick Budin in a sometimes spiteful and physical match which saw a number of the Australians replaced with injuries - none of which were serious but may have ruled them out of yesterday's match against the same team.

This was the second match of the four-match tour which ends on Wednesday (tomorrow).

The first match ended in a 1-1 draw with the Australian goal scored by Orhan Dincer in the first half.

Media Liaison Officer Richard Beazley said: "The lads are finding it difficult in the 30+ heat and tired in both matches mid-way through the second half. However they continued to play well under the conditions.

"The team is now based in Suva for the next few days with matches scheduled against Fiji U/20s."

BRIDGES SCORES WINNER AGAINST OLD CLUB

Sunderland old boy Michael Bridges came back to haunt his former club as he fired Leeds to a 2-1 victory in the top-of-the-table showdown at the Stadium of Light.

Bridges struck six minutes after the break to add to Jason Wilcox's stunning 24th-minute opener - his first for the club - and it looked like the Premiership leaders were coasting.

But a mistake by Jonathan Woodgate allowed Kevin Phillips to pull one back within a minute with his 20th of the season to set up a tense finish.

The Yorkshiremen extended their lead over Manchester United to four points after successive league defeats by Arsenal and Aston Villa, but they were made to fight all the way by a Sunderland side looking for their first win of the year.

The Weariders lacked a cutting edge in the absence of the suspended Niall Quinn, but battled manfully to force their way back into a game which rapidly slipping away from them.

Sheffield Wednesday moved off the bottom of the Premiership table for the first time since August thanks to a shock 1-0 victory over Spurs at White Hart Lane.

It was under-fire Wednesday's second successive victory and with Watford losing the relegation six-pointer against Bradford, the Owls leapfrogged the Hornets at the bottom.

The all-important goal came against the run of play as Niclas Alexandersson netted his sixth of the season.

A clever lob into the box by Gerald Sibon found Wim Jonk and the Dutchman coolly laid it off for Alexandersson to firmly bury a right foot drive.

Meanwhile at Valley Parade, Bradford battled to a 3-2 triumph over Graham Taylor's Watford.

Peter Beagrie put Bradford in front from the penalty spot on 25 minutes after Watford's Des Lyttle was adjudged to have brought down Dean Windass only for Micah Hyde to level after 33 minutes.

But Gareth Whalley boosted the Bantams when he ran through to restore the lead after 37 minutes.

In the second half Bradford continued to dominate and Andy O'Brien put his own goal nightmare at Hillsborough last week behind him by grabbing the third on 49 minutes.

However a late goal from new-signing Heidar Helguson set up a grandstand finish but the Bantams held on.

At the other end of the table, Liverpool failed to capitalise on the top three sitting out Saturday's programme as they were held to a goalless draw at Anfield by Middlesbrough.

And to add to Liverpool's frustrations they - and England - were dealt a blow with Michael Owen limping out of the action in the first half with a recurrence of his hamstring problems.

Liverpool were looking to close the gap at the top of the table but they failed to break down the visitors.

Indeed Gerard Houllier's side almost went a goal down when Paul Ince, returning to his old club, ran through but stopped when he thought he was offside only for the flag to stay down, missing a golden opportunity to put his side in front.

One of the few bright spots for the Anfield faithful was seeing Ince go into referee Steve Dunn's notebook for a tackle from behind on Vladimir Smicer.

Southampton kept just above the relegation zone as they bounced back from their hammering at Newcastle last Sunday with a 2-0 win over Everton at The Dell.

Everton suffered an early blow in the game when goalkeeper Paul Gerrard was forced off with a pulled muscle.

His place was taken by Steve Simonsen, formerly of Tranmere, who came on for his Everton debut.

But he could only get a hand on a 20-yard shot from Jo Tessem which gave the Saints the lead four minutes after half-time.

Matthew Oakley doubled the lead in the 56th minute. The combative midfielder picked up a ball midway inside the Everton half and ran at the heart of their defence.

He rode two tackles before curling a precise right-footed shot past Simonsen's dive.

Derby and Coventry, two sides desperate not to get dragged back into the relegation mire, had to settle for a point after a goalless draw at Pride Park.

Elsewhere Paulo Wanchope's first goals since November gave West Ham a 3-1 success over Leicester at Filbert Street.

Wanchope, who missed a sitter against Aston Villa last week, made no mistake after 13 minutes when he neatly converted a Frank Lampard pass to make it 1-0 to the Hammers.

But Emile Heskey, himself short of goals of late, levelled after 24 minutes for Leicester when he cut inside with purpose from the left and rifled past Shaka Hislop for 1-1.

In the fourth minute of first-half injury-time, Wanchope claimed his and West

Ham's second when he intercepted a Michael Carrick shot and defeated Pegguy Arphexad from a narrow angle.

Paolo Di Canio made it 3-1 on the hour mark to Harry Redknapp's men and that was how it stayed.

Newcastle's fine recent run came to a halt as they lost 2-0 against Wimbledon at Selhurst Park.

The Dons, unbeaten in 12 home games against the Geordies, were indebted to goals from Robbie Earle (48) and Marcus Gayle (69).

In the day's remaining game in the top flight, Aston Villa and Chelsea

Norwich reject Andy Hunt came back to haunt his old club as his Carrow Road hat-trick maintained Charlton's position at the top of Division One.

Hunt scored in the 42nd, 73rd and 78th minutes to reach 14 for the season and give a massive boost to Alan Curbishley's hopes of leading the Addicks back into the Premiership.

Their cause was bolstered by Manchester City's 1-0 defeat to Sheffield United at Bramall Lane.

It was another case of revenge as Michael Brown grabbed the winner against the club who sold him.

Barnsley made up ground in emphatic fashion by smashing Blackburn's recent good run at Oakwell.

Barnsley were coasting at 4-1 at half-time through Bruce Dyer, Craig Hignett - with his 100th league goal - Darren Barnard and Neil Shipperley.

Rovers' solitary reply had come from Per Frandsen but there was no joy for them after the break with Dyer hitting his second on 72 minutes to complete the rout.

Huddersfield moved back on the right track with Marcus Stewart netting in the 13th minute to bring a 1-0 win over Tranmere, while Ipswich were held at Bolton who led through Dean Holdsworth's 65th minute strike before Matt Holland grabbed a point for the East Anglians in the 85th minute.

Wolves were three up inside half an hour against Queen's Park Rangers through Steve Sedgley (22), Michael Branch (23) and Ade Akinbiyi (29).

But as Wolves eased up Rangers came back with late goals from Gavin

Michael Owen goes down with another injury scare.

Peacock and Steve Slade, forcing the Midlanders held on for a 3-2 win.

Walsall pulled off their third away win of the season with a thrilling 3-2 win at Crewe. Tom Bennett and Michael Ricketts gave the Saddlers a two-goal lead before Steve Macauley pulled one back from the penalty spot.

Kevin Harper restored the cushion on the stroke of half-time and, although Paul Tait reduced the arrears in the 67th minute Alex could not find an equaliser.

Fulham's challenge for a play off place took another body blow when Jack Lester's 56th minute goal gave Grimsby a 1-0 success at Craven Cottage, only their second away win of the season.

Injury-hit Birmingham came unstuck at Port Vale, going down 3-1. Tony Naylor gave Vale the lead in the 14th minute but Bryan Hughes equalised three minutes after the break.

Vale stormed grabbed the points with two goals in the last four minutes, through Tommy Widdrington's penalty and Tony Rougier.

Tony Dinning gave Stockport the lead with a 14th minute penalty after he was brought down by Portsmouth's Darren Moore at Edgeley Park, but it ended 1-1 when Ceri Hughes levelled in the 44th minute.

Nottingham Forest at least managed to keep a clean sheet but that was their only consolation in a drab 0-0 draw with West Bromwich Albion.

CELTIC FALL BEHIND AFTER 1-1 DRAW

Still banging them in - Mark Viduka

Rangers strengthened their position at the top of the Premier League with an emphatic 5-0 victory against Aberdeen.

Goals from Craig Moore, Giovanni van Bronckhorst, Arthur Numan, Rod Wallace and Barry Ferguson took them seven points clear of Celtic.

Moore made the breakthrough in the 36th minute with a powerful header into the corner for only his second goal of the season following an inswinging corner from van Bronckhorst.

Dutch midfielder van Bronckhorst added the second with a snap shot from 25 yards that deceived veteran keeper Jim Leighton. Aberdeen were becoming demoralised and their misery increased two minutes before the break when Numan grabbed the third with a fine left-foot finish inside the area.

Wallace tapped the ball in to make it four on the hour mark after a surging run by Andrei Kanchelskis.

Turkey midfielder Tugay Kerimoglu came on for his debut for the table toppers soon afterwards following his £1.3million move from Galatasaray.

And Rangers added a fifth goal in the 82nd minute with Barry Ferguson's first of the season after Wallace had played the ball into his path.

Celtic's title hopes were dealt a blow as they were held to a 1-1 draw at Kilmarnock.

The Bhoys are now six points behind their Old Firm rivals Rangers in the Scottish Premier Division, with the Gers having a game in hand.

Mark Viduka was the first to benefit on 31 minutes when his close-range strike came off a defender to send the keeper the wrong way.

However, Killie were level nine minutes later when a Mark Reilly drive struck Vidar Riseth and flew into the net.

Elsewhere the winter break failed to have a galvanising effect on third-placed Dundee United and fifth-placed Hibernian at Ibrox who produced a tame goalless draw at Tannadice Park.

Both sides have enjoyed recent trips to warmer climes and gave every indication that they wished they were still enjoying the sun.

Motherwell stay in fourth after a 1-1 draw with St Johnstone.

A Graham Jones goal gave St Johnstone a first-half lead at McDiarmid Park but Motherwell snatched a point when Stephen McMillan fired home with five minutes remaining.

In the other match Hearts, despite missing front men Gary McSwegan and Stephane Adam through injury, had enough fire power to see off Dundee 2-0 at Tynecastle. Gary Wales clinically despatched a low shot past Douglas from eight yards to make it 1-0 on 17 minutes before Darren Jackson doubled their advantage shortly after half-time.
